The storm interferred with the attendance at the Read Fund lecture on Electricity, Wednesday night, but it is intended to have it repeated on Dec. 13th, when all desiring will be admitted, whether holding tickets or not.

—An alarm from box 14, Newton, Tuesday afternoon was for a fire in the residence of J. C. Potter, Walnut park, It was confined to the back L. The cause of the blaze was an attempt to thaw the water pipes in the cellar under the kitchen floor, which resulted in setting fire to the wood work. The damage is estimated at about $1500. —Messrs. Hibbard & Procter found one way to draw a crowd when they announced that election returns would be displayed in their store. After the store was packed full the sidewalk was crowded with seekers after election news. Generally Newton people can wait until next morning, but it was different this year.

—Ward Seven has an entire change of representatives in the city council this year, Mr. S. A. D. Sheupard for alderman and Messrs. Bothfeld and Weed for members of the common council. They say there is no doubt about one member of the common council being always found "under his own hat," as Mr. Bothfeld's independence is proverbial.

—The defeat of Councilman Estabrooke is to be regretted; he took up the unpopular side in Ward One, and lost a great many votes in consequence, but Mr. Estabrooke believes in having the courage of his convictions. Mr. W. R. Grace is the councilman elect, and his friends expect him to make a very creditable record. He was born in Newton and is well acquainted with city affairs.

—Wednesday morning the thermometer.

—Wednesday morning the thermometer registered a few degrees below zero, but during the day the cold moderated and there was a heavy snow fall, which in the evening turned to rain with a south wind and the mercury went up to 58. Before morning the wind changed again to the northwest and the mercury again went towards the zero point. A change of 60 degrees and back again in 24 hours is rather phonomenal even for New England.

—A small gathering of young people from different parts of New England was held last Friday evening, to celebrate a Lake View (Chataugua) re-union. The party sat down to the banquet table at about eight o'clock, and did full justice to the excellent repast furnished by Mr. Lee, after which a bright interesting Toast list was responded to. An old Lake View amusement was then indulged in, which with some musical entertainment filled up the short evening. The party broke up shortly before midnight after a most enjoyable time.

Mr. John Morgan, father of Postmaster Morgan and of Ticket Agent Morgan, both of this city, died at Holliston last Saturday, aged 85 years. The interment was in West Dedham, where the deceased lived for over 60 years. Mr. Morgan helped to build the first railroad in the United States, which shows how short a time it is since all these modern conveniences have been known. He was a highly respected citizen and leaves the two sons in the city, and two daughters, Mrs. J. M. Fiske of East Cambridge, and Mrs. Hastings of Framingham. Mr. Chas. Mr rgan, formerly of this city but now ticket agent at Brookline, was a grandson of the deceased.

-Those present at Goodwill Hall, Ba-con's Block, the last three Sabbath evenlings, have been greatly interested and profited listening to the lectures to young women. Those who missed hearing "The Young Woman's Preparation," "The Young Women in Society," and "The Young Women in Society," and "The Young Women's Place in the World's Work," have lost that which cannot easily be made up to them. He became a resident of Newton in 1873, and has taken an active interest in its development-His phenomenal vote last year showed his availability as a candidate, and this year there was a demand from the Republicans, Independents and Democrats, that he should be nominated, as they wanted to see such a practical and successful business man at the head of city affairs.

—Dr. Field and family had quite an adventure on their way out to Calfornia, with the Raymond excursion party. The Pasadena Daily Star, of Nov. 24, gives an interesting account of the affair. The party were near the end of their journey, when the train met a burning bridge in the Cajon pass. The engine, passenger car and two Pullmans went on the bridge and were derailed, the train being stopped. The cars were immediatly enveloped in flames, but the passengers escaped, leaving hats, shawls, jewelry, etc. Most of the trunks in the baggage car were thrown out and saved, and Dr. Field's party only lost a small part of their baggage. Dr. Field went through the excitement all right, and at the date the paper was issued, was at the Painter House, feeling better than he had since leaving home. Had the train been ten minutes later, it would have plunged through the bridge, and the party are congratulating themselves that they escaped such a terrible fate.

AFTER THE RETURNS.

GREAT ENTHUSIASM OVER THE CITIZENS' VICTORY.

The contest on Tuesday was such a close one that both sides were prepared to celebrate the victory, but the Republito celebrate the victory, but the Republicans postponed their fireworks and the Citizens fired the cannons, shot off skyrockets, touched off red lights, and in other ways showed their satisfaction over the election returns. About 6 p. m., when the returns from the south side of the city came in, things looked rather blue, and it looked as though Upper Falls would have the celebration, but the wards on the north side of the city all gave more or less of a majority for the Citizens' candidate, and when wor I camethat the Ward Three counters had got that the Ward Three counters had got up to 500 and found 12 majority for Mr. Hibbard with 27 votes more to count, the block were packed with people, even the hallway being crowded, and the crowd cheered for everything they could think of. Mr. Hibbard himself was sent for over to Nonantum, where a large crowd had assembled, and Atheneum hall had been secured, where he was cheered till the echoes rang and gave a brief address. Refreshments were served by Paxton, and illuminations and fireworks gave the place a Fourth of July appearance.

At 90 clock, Mr. Hibbard and his party left for his residence, where the whole of Newton proper had assembled to congratulate him, besides large delegations from the Newtons improper.

A large company of boys surrounded the house, burning red lights, another company had built a bonfire on the Silsby land, across the street, and the neighboring houses were brightly illuminated. Mrs. John Werner, Park street; Mr. H. S. Crowell, Mr. Geo. H. Mandell, and a number of others had every window lighted, while Mr. P. A. Murray's handsome residence had all the gas lighted, and a row of candles in every window. A cannon from somewhere in the vicinity kept booming and the visitors kept coming. Although Mr. Hibbard's residence is one of the largest in Newton, there was not even standing room inside; the crowd was a very jolly one, and every little while some one would shout "How's H. E. Hibbard?" when all together would reply "He's all right," and the same thing would be asserted of Geo. B. Jones, W. J. Follett, and others prominent in the campaign. Mr. Hibbard had a trial of the handshaking part of the Mayor's duties, while Mr. Paxton and a large corps of assistants looked after the material welfare of the visitors in had a trial of the handshaking part of

THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

Both branches of the city council met last Friday evening. The contested items in the appropriation budget passed through several stages of discussion and action, the items for schools being considered by a conference committee.

It was finally voted in the common council to fix the appropriation for schools at $110,000, the aldermen concursion.

schools at $110,000, the altermen contring.

The total appropriations for 1891, aggregating $655,372, were finally passed by both branches.

In the board of aldermen, the special committee appointed to investigate the police signal system was discharged, and an order adopted authorizing the mayor to appoint a committee of three disinterested citizens to investigate the workings of the police signal system. The order was voted down in the common council, and that body noncurred on an order providing an appropriation of $650 order providing an appropriation of $650 for new fire alarm boxes.

Newton Taxation.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC
We wonder whether there is in this country or any other a municipality with a Topoulation of about 23,000 persons taxed between six and seven hundred thousand dollars annually for current

The following are some of the items making up with others, nearly $700,000., which will be the basis of taxation for the year 1891.

Widening and improvment of streets

General repairs of same,
Sidewalks and street crossings,

Street-lights, 26.000
Use of Hydrants, etc. 12,800
Most of the above items are the same

Most of the above items are the same for 1890.

Now these estimates for the coming year made up before hand in baste by citizens croaded by their own private business, besides that of the city which has been intrusted to them, is necessarily largely guess work. Under the present system citizens generally know little or nothing of how it will turn out, and we have observed that in some cases where more has been appropriated for objects than was needed, yet it was all spent, while other objects, of which the need was great, were neglected. Indeed, an estim te made up before hand for a coming year, must necessarily contain a targe element of guess work.

The tax rate of 1890 was very high, and it is said that that of 1891, must be yet higher.

To our Advertising doesn't pay, For the man's non-compon mentis, For the man's non-compon mentis, For the man's non-compon mentis, it is said that that of 1891, must be yet higher.

We have no belief, Mr. Editor, in the necessity for this. With exact data as to the expenditure of every item of the appropriations of 1890 before us, we have no doubt it would be plainly possible and wise to reduce, instead of increasing the rate. But without such exact data as to 1890, it is not possible to see clearly what changes it is wise to make in the appropriations which are to provide for 1891.

To enable them to act with wise economy every voter needs to have an exact statement, showing how each item of appropriation of last year has been expended, and we believe that such a statement should be at once prepared at whatever the cost of clerical lab r, because it would save the raising by taxation of a large sum.

High School Notes. The first regular meeting of the Lyceum held three weeks ago was a success considering the weather. This Saturday evening, Dec. 6, the second regular meeting will be held at the High School building. A fine musical program has been provided and a good debate on the Federal Election Bill, the bill for the evening, is expected.

By the kindness of Mr. Goodwin the pupils of the school were permitted to vote for Mayor. The result of the vote in the school gave Mr. Pettee a majority of 34, but this did not elect him Mayor of the City of Newton.

The second issue of the "Review," has appeared full of interesting reading matter. The Christmas number of the "Review," which will be out about Christmas time, will be enlarged to twenty pages, and a pure white cover printed with red will enclose the reading matter. Every body interested in the school should obtain one of these numbers.

The Electric Railroad having made reduced rates for the school, many of the boys used the cars to come to drill on Wednesday. It was expected to get them to the Armory about ten minutes before the train would arrive. Such was not the case on Wednesday. The motor car while running down, slipped very much on the rails because of the snow. But the boys need not give up as arrangements will be made so that they can arrive at the Armory early.

A Change of Plan.

A woman entered a grocery on Michi gan avenue one day last week in some thing of a hurry, and said to the proprie

"I want a glass fruit-jar holding a quart, and you may put half a pound of gunpowder into it."
"Yes'm. New way to do up late peaches?"

"No, sir. It's a way to do up a dog."

"No, sir. It's a way to do up a dog."
"How?"
"My boy Willie has got a dog under our barn and he won't come out. Willie is going to blow him up.
"Great Scotts, ma'am, but if you explode this powder under the barn you'll set the building on fire."
"Would it, really?"
"Of course it would."
"Willie will be terribly disappointed."
"But you'll save the barn."
"Welli", she said, as she picked up her money, "I'll have to change my plans. I'll buy him an auger and let him bore holes in the floor and pour hot water down on the dog.,"—Detroit Free Press.

What Sarah Said to Mary.

What Sarah Said to Mary.

It was on a Madison avenue car at 6 o'clock. Among those who had seats were eight men. Among those standing up were two shop girls. After waiting for a reasonable time for some one to ofter them seats, one of the girls said:—"Mary, it's too bad, isn't it?" "What, Sarah?" asked the other. "That they are all bow-legged." "Who?"

"These eight gentlemen. I have patronized this line for five years, and I never saw a bow-legged man give himself away by standing up in a car. It wouldn't be reasonable to expect it.

"Of course not."

"Of course not."
In just five seconds eight men were on their feet, bowing and smiling and asking Sarah and Mary if they wouldn't be so everlastingly kind and obliging as to take seats—take half the car, in fact, and they took it.—New York Sun.

Reasons for Correction.

"I desire to deny the statement in your paper," he said politely to the editor, "that I eloped with Miss Richascream night before last, sir."
"Why?" asked the editor, suspiciously, "Because, sir,I did not elope with her."

"Because, sir,I did not elope with her."
"Oh, you diden't?" said the editor, with scornful doubt. "I presume she eloped all by herself."
"No, sir, she did not," and his manuer was humbler than ever. "She eloped with the other fellow one hour before my arrival on the spot.—Washington Star.

Shakespeare's Fault.

Courteous manager (to actor who has applied for a position in Shakespearan company)—You have talent, young man, talent of a very exceptional order; but I regret to say that Shakespeare has not created any character which will dovetail nicely with your genius. Messrs. Hollander, Bradshaw & Folsom have a striking trademark at the head of their advertisement in our paper this week, which readily calls one's attention to their advertisement. As they combine their wholesale with their retail business, and are well known as large cash buyers of goods, they are in position to make extremely low prices upon all the thousands of articles with which the 80 departments of their store are crowded.

The druggists claim that people call daily for the new cure for constipation and sick headache, discovered by Dr. Silas Lane while in the Rocky Mountains. It is said to be Oregon grape root (a great remedy in the far west for those complaints) combined with simple herbs, and is made for use by pouring on boiling water to draw out the strength. It sells at 50 cents a package and is called Lane's Family Medicine.

Last Monday evening Dr. J. F. Frisbie gave a lecture on the White Mountains, gave a lecture on the winte mountains, and illustrated it with nearly seventy pictures. The first part of this lecture was a geological description of the formation of these mountains. The geolegist has proved this the Old World; that before the Orient emerged above the primeval ocean, the Occidental land rose a broad band from the north, southward a broad band from the north, southward to the Great Lakes, then turning at near-ly right angles stretched northwestward far up towards the Artic Ocean. Long ages passed away; another fold or belt of the crust rose to the north and eastward extended far to the south, corresponding somewhat to the present Atlantic coast line; and westward, this side the Rocky Mountains, a huge barrier, extending from near the Gulf of Mexico to the Mountains, a huge barrier, extending from near the Gulf of Mexico to the north, was elevated above the water, perhaps joining the other fold in that region, and enclosing a Mediterranean sea of gigantic proportions, and where the White Mountains now rear their picturesque summits there existed an arm of this shallow sea.

From these surrounding heights came the debris, disintegrated and washed down by the rains and rivers, and deposited beneath the water, that now constitutes the rock formations compassing these mountains, now elevated by the lateral pressure, the horrizontal crushing of the strata consequent upon a cooling and contracting globe. Upheavals and subsidences followed each other until another fold arose on the western margin of the broad eastern belt of land. This fold, bearing the name of the Applachian Mountain chain, extends from the valley and water shed of the Mississippi, parallel to the present Atlantic coast, through the southern, Middle and New England states, and onward towards the north. Breaks occur in numerous places from various causes, but the chain can be easily traced, although its continuity seems broken.

England states, and onward towards the north. Breaks occur in numerous places from various causes, but the chain can be easily traced, although its continuity seems broken.

The White Hills are a group of mountains bunched up to-gether, constituting a link in the Appanchian chain, but with missing links to the north and south, following the last upheaval, when they were moved together, rent, seamed and pierced, evidences of which are seen to-day, although other mighty forces have changed their form and custom during the long ages since they reached their greatest height.

The first dry land in New Hampshire composed of a few islands, constituting an archipelego. Two of these small elevations touched the White Mountain region, one pointing up from Lake Unnepesaukee just reaching with its wedgeshaped northern point, the present water shed of the Saco. The other, broader and longer, extended up through what is now the Franconia range.

During the succeeding ages the constant oscillations produced upheavals and subsidences with frequent immense outflows of lava through the fissures in the crust, till the whole region was dry land. There are four highways or approaches to these mountains, and each by a river valley; the Androscoggin on the wost, from which we can strike either the Franconia range or head of the Saco; the Merrimack on the south, from which the Franconia range is best approached by the way of the Penigwasset valley, and the Saco south-eastward, the valley of which divides the White Mountain region into nearly equal halves.

The pictures first thrown upon the screen were taken near the Intervale House, North Conway, showing the Saco meadows, Cathedral Rocks, White Horse Ledges, and Moat Mountain. The winter scene of this valley and mountain was particularly beautiful.

The Notch, the Wiley House, Mts. Webster and Willey were next given, and then numerous pictures on the Bridle Path to the summit of Mt. Washington, Tuckerman's and Huntington ravines, the Great Gulf, and all the higher mountain summits.

BOWLING NOTES.

BOWLING NOTES.

The interclub bowling match on Saturday between the Norfolk House Casino team and one from the Woodland Park club, showed some of the possibilities of the game from a social point of view. Not only were the spectators ten times as numerous as the players, but at least one-fourth of the total number were of the fair sex, and evidently took a lively interest in the game.

Only two games were played this week

Only two games were played this week in the Amateur Interclub Bowling League. Both were bowled on Wednesday evening, when the Newtons played the Chelseas at Chelsea, and the Casinos played the B. A. A.'s on the B. A. alleys. In the Boston Amateur Interclub Bowling League, prizes are to be awarded to the first three teams at the conclusion of the games. There will also be an individual prize for the player who makes the highest score, but he must play in at least one-half of the matches and one-half of the games upon other than home alleys. Fred Wood of the B. A. A. won the individual prize last year.

The Secretary of the New York Bowling League has written to Secretary Fred Wood of the Interclub Bowling League asking for a match of four games between teams representing both leagues, It is desired to have two games played in New York and two in Boston late in the season, when the men have reached their best form. This will be about the middle of M arch. It is hoped to get a team from Chicago to take part in the match also.

The Theatres.

The Combined appearance of Mr. Booth and Mr. Barrett, after an absence of two years, is the most important event of the senson as thus far passed. It was a pleasure at the Park Theatre Monday evening to observe that both actors retain the full vigor of their strength, and have lost nothing of their power to move and to charm. The matchless verse of Shakespeare in the mouths of such artists as these takes on such delights that every moment pleases, and the audience only regrets that the occasions do not oftener come in the present engagement is varied in attractions, a change of bill being presented every night of the first week. That the coming fortnight offers a feast of good things for the lovers of Shakespeare hardly needs to be said. "Julius Crosar" will be the attraction Saturday evening.

The Boston Theatre has been well filled this week and the audiences delighted with the fine scenic effects, the claborate and beautiful pictures, the thrilling tableaux and the clever acting of "The Soudan." Such a success as this play has won was not expected, but it is well deserved. Excursion parties from surrounding town continue to swell the size of the audiences. Those who saw "The Soudan" several weeks ago should see it again.

saw "The Soudan" several weeks ago should see it again.

The "Merry Monarch" greeted another immense audience at the Globe Theatre Monday evening, and the valuable standing room even was fully apppreciated by late comers. No light opera has ever had a more successful record in Boston than this last offering of Mr. Francis Wilson, and it seems entirely possible that the engagement will be a greater financial success than any yet known in the Globe's history. Mr. Wilson is so Irresistibly funny in all his seenes, and he is so ably supported by his company, that the success he has made is easily explained, and it appears entirely reasonable that the "Merry Monarch" could retain his command of his Boston subjects for the balance of the season. He evidently desires to extend his domains and increase his subjects, so he will remain here but two weeks more, making his farewell on Saturday, Dec. 13. As Mr. Wilson finds it impossible to fitly impersonate the title role more than seven times each week, the usual Wednesday matinee is omitted during his engagement at the Globe.

The third and last week of the "Paul Jones" engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre was successfully begun last Monday evening by Miss Agnes Huntington and her opera comique company, a large audience being present and the opera having a very pleasing reception. The leading numbers sung by Miss Huntington were, as usual, redemanded, and the clever scenes between Messrs. Moslyn and Lowes created the same arthusism. clever scenes between Messrs. Moslyn and James created the same enthusiasm as in earlier performances. Miss Huntington and her company will appear for the last time here on Saturday afternoon and evening. Next week J. K. Starved in the Midst of Plenty.

It seems strange that in this city a man should die of starvation, but such is the fact in reference to Professor Sanborn, the elocutionist, who died at St. Stephen's hospital. Professor Sanborn came to this city some eighteen months ago and began teaching elocution. He was of a quiet turn of mind and his habits were good. He obtained a few pupils, but not enough to earn him anything like a living. He rented a room, and by the most rigid economy and by doing without food was able to save enough to pay the rent. Failing to get pupils he has been starving himself for months.

Not long since, when giving a lesson, he fell in a faint from exhaustion on account of being so weak for want of food. From this his friends suspected his condition and they brought him plenty to eat, but he had done without food for so long that his stomach would not digest the food. He was thoroughly honest, and had with him that pride which made him feel that he would rather go hungry and, if need be, starve than tell his friends he was too poor to buy a meal's victuals.—Richmond (Va.) Whig. Not long since, when giving a lesson

C TENEWION TRANSCRIPT HAS BEEN CONSOLIDATED WITH THE GRAPP

TUESDAY'S ELECTION.

The election of Tuesday was one of the most hotly contested ever held in Newton, as the closeness of the vote will show. The chief fight was over the mayor, although there were several minor contests that added to the interest, and kept each ward wide awake.

It turned out to be the north side of the city against the south on the mayor-alty issue, Mr. Hibbard carrying every ward on the north side and Mr. Peteer the south.

dorsed by his own ward, and justified the assertion that he carried the vote of that ward in his pocket, he getting 205 majority there, and Ward Six came out as usual for the Republican candidate, Mr. Pettee carrying it by 210. It is the one ward in the city which under all circumstances is solidly Republican. These two wards gave Mr. Pettee a lead of 505 wotes, and made the contest very close. wotes, and made the contest very close. Mr. Hibbard carried his ward by 255, a remarkable showing, as Ward Seven is full of independent voters, who do not accept any leadership, and in Ward One, Mr. Hibbard had 182 majority, the ward usually being very close. Ward Two gave a smaller Citizens' majority than usual, as Alderman Pettee had many friends there, and his supporters exfriends there, and his supporters ex-pected that he would carry it. Ward Three is always doubtful, and always Three is always doubtful, and always late in giving its returns, and as it was evident that its vote was to decide, there was a good deal of grumbling over the long delay in getting returns, but when finally it was announced that it gave 18 majority for Mr. Hibbard, then the music began. Ward Four sent its returns in early, and the assertion that the Republican party had gone to pieces there was borne out by the figures, which gave 79 majority for the Citizens candidate. Lower Falls, which was snubbed by the Republican caucus, and its candidate for alderman refused be-cause he was not a Republican, now has both an alderman and a councilman. Partisan politics in a municipal election are evidently not endorsed by the people.

The closeness of the contest was evidently due to Alderman Pettee's great popularity in his own ward and throughout the city, which could not be over-come by any mistakes made by the managers of his campaign. Taken altoagers of ms campaign. Taken alto-gether it was a most remarkable vic-tory for non-partisanship in city affairs, and Mr. Hibbard's friends may well feel enthusiastic over a victory gained against such odds, and they are confident that Mr. Hibbard's course in office will con-vince even his hitterest opnoments that wince even his bitterest opponents that he is the right man in the right place. We may look for a practical, business-like administration of city affairs, which will commend itself to all the people.

THE NEXT MAYOR.

The election of Tuesday has made it certain that Mr. H. E. Hibbard will be the next mayor of Newton, and his friends are confident that his administration o' city affairs will show the wisdom of his election to such a reponsible position, and that before the year is out the resi-ments in the other wards will be as enthu-siastic Hibbard men as are now the men ün Wards Two and (Seven. Mr. Hibbard Ras lived in this part of Newton for fif-teen or more years, and is pretty well &nown by his neighbors, and those who know him best have been his most en-have been absurd rumors in circulation about the great overturning there will be sweep of all the city departments. This accounted for some of the opposition to Mr. Hibbard, but it is all pure nonsense, of course. No man who could be elected anayor of Newton would do such a fool-Esh thing, and last of all such a practical business man as Mr. Hibbard. In his let-ter of acceptance he stated that he had made and would make no pledges or promises to any person or party, other than to administer city affairs conscien-tiously, and to enforce the laws without fear or favor. Ask any one who knows Sear of layor. Ask any one who knows the man, and they will testify that Mr. Hibbard always means just what he says. The city officials will find him perfectly fair and unprejudiced, and he has no friends to reward and no enemies to punish. No mayor ever assumed office less perfect which we have a subjective and a supplication of the same and a supplications.

his official acts, and if he does not merit the approval of all fair-minded citizens they will be greatly disappointed. The election is over, the people have decided, and it is now the duty of all good citi-zens to forget all campaign differences and unite in supporting the next city government by all means in their power, and in this way help to make Newton the model city that we would all like to

THOSE LIBEL SUITS.

The air was full of stories last Saturday about libel suits against one of the New-ton papers, and at 5 o'clock the writs were served on the Newton Journal, by Deputy Sheriff Saville of Malden, the writs being issued from the Superior Court of Middlesex County. There were five suits, for $5,000 each, brought as an action of tort by Hon. Heman M. Burr, Messrs, E. T. Colburn, W. E. Webster, R. H. Gardiner and Geo. H. Ellis. The paper was attached and a keeper put in office.

The cause of the suits is said to be a paragraph in an editoral published last week, in which it was stated that a trade had been made prior to the representa-tive convention, between certain Republican delegates from Wards Five and Six and the Ward Three delegation, by which it was agreed that if the former would support the candidate of the latter, for representative, they would reciprocate in the municipal election, by supporting

Libel suits are something new in New-Those suits are something new in Acw-ton, and the news that these suits had been made rather surprised people. That trades are made in politics is so well known, that the statement that a trade has been made in any specified case creates no surprise and casts no special reflection on the parties engaged in it, provided that each party can furnish a valid inducement for a swap. But that the Ward Three candidate should have had a majority of votes on the first ballot, when his name had not previously been mentioned, was mysteriousenough to give rise to all sorts of gossip, and the following explanation of the whole thing is now made public for the

Ward. Three has, as every one knows, a number of very eloqueut political workers. It is said that some of them can talk 24 hours on a stretch, which may be a libel, but the fact is these men were sent to Wards Five and Six to talk the delegates from those wards over into supporting the Ward Three candidate. There is no secret about this, nor that they did not succeed on the first trial. On the second visit some weakened, but others held out, and it was only after chronic symptoms appeared that success was gained. The Wards Five and Six men are honest and upright, fond of their own way, but they were all brought to see that discretion is the better part of valor. Life is sweet to most of us, and especially to residents on the South side of the city, and self-preservation is the first law of nature. They were so reduced that they were ready to promise anything and so the Ward Three men carried

Looking at the matter in this light is it any wonder that these men felt libelled when accused of a trade with Ward Three? It was an imputation on their shrewdness, as Ward Three had nothing to swap, as was shown Tuesday's elec-tion and also, after all they had suf-fered, they felt that to be accused of a trade was the last straw. When the case is brought to a trial, they will set forth the story in its true light, and meanwhile the sympathy of the public is rather with the Journal, which is having offers of assistance from every direction. The above plain statement of facts is certainly due the public, and to the gentlemen concerned, and it may be said that if they had been accused of trading with any other ward in the city the libel would not have been such a

THE CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council will be a strong body the coming year, as the new blood that will be infused into it is of the best quality, and the old members have most of them proved their fitness. In the board of aldermen, Messrs. Coffin, Fenno, and Harbach are re-elected, Messrs. Luke, Crehore and Hyde are promoted from the lower branch, and Mr. S. A. D. Sheppard will represent the new element, and will prove one of the best members. Mr. Luke has been one of the best members of the Common Council, and his promotion has been fairly earned; Mr. Hyde has made an excellent record and is well posted on all city affairs, and Mr. Crehore is a young man of ability and has won approval by his course in the lower board.

In the Common Council Ward One re elects Mr. Forknall, and Mr. Grace will take the place of Mr. Estabrooks; Messrs. Churchill and Mead are re-elected from Ward Two; Mr. Dutch is re-elected from Ward Three and Mr. Merchant takes the place of Mr. Luke, and will sustain the high reputation of Wards Three's delegation; Ward Four sends two new men Mr. C. H. Sprague and Mr. Allen Jordan, both good selections; Ward Five re-elects Mr. Collins, and Mr. E. Moulton takes the place of Mr. Hyde; Ward Six wisely re-elects Messrs. Richardson and Roffe and Ward Seven sends new men, Messrs Bothfeld and Weed. Evidently the Com-mon Council will be abundantly able to take care of itself with such men at the aish. No mayor ever assumed office less suntrammeled by any obligations, and as he has not served a term in the City Council, he will enter upon his duties without any prejudices for or against any officials, and that is all there is to any stories about changes in city officials. All that the friends of the next mayor ask is that the people do not rely upon any rumors, but wait and judge him by

Mr. Collins has already been put forward as a candidate, and the battle is likely to be warmly contested. Mr. Collins was elected on the Republican ticket, but eleven out of the fourteen members had nominations from the Citizens, or Citizens and Republicans combined.

A NOVEL APPORTIONMENT.

Quite a surprise has been prepared for the Republicans of the city, in the shape of a new apportionment for regresenta-tion in next year's city convention, based on the vote of Tuesday. The scheme was adopted by the Republican Ward and

City committee, some time ago.

The basis is three representatives from each ward, with additions according to the Republican vote of Tuesday. A prominent number of the committee gives this as the way the wards will be

Ward One " Two " Three Four Seven

Total According to this ingenious arrangement, if Wards Five and Six make a tr—, that is if they should—well, if they should happen to unite with Ward Three, they can control the convention, and either of these wards will have as many votes as Wards One and Seven combined.

The combinations from this table may be figured up by any Republican who desires and it does not require much of a prophet to predict some very emphatic propose to present some very emphatic protests against such an apportionment. But perhaps next year every one will be convinced of the folly of partisan nominations in a city election, and will be ready to join the Citizens' movement, which will give a convenient of the convenient which will give each ward an equal chance in the convention. Such an apportionment would only create an unhappy division between the North and South sections of the city, which could not fail to have a bad effect upon the city, and although the South side could dictate the nominations, the North side.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

dictate the nominations, the North side could decide the election, as the recent

The election resulted in the defeat of Mr. Barnard for the school board, which is a matter for regret, as it will be hard to find a man to take his place. This was the only contest and he was opposed because he looked too faithfully after the interests of the city, but nevertheless his work remains as an example of what should be done by members of the school board.

The women showed that they are shrewd politicians this year and they passed around the word to vote only for passed around the word to vote only for Mrs. Davis, by which they scored a vic-tory, and succeeded in getting 492 more votes than Mr. Barnard received. Mr. Bond, being on both tickets, was of course elected.

In regard to the other members there was no contest, and Rev. Mr. Hornbrooke had the honor of leading all the rest with 2346 votes, Mr. Harwood coming next with 2306, and Rev. Mr. White third with 2206. The board will present quite a change the coming year, with so many new and progressive members, and some excellent work ought to be expected of such a board.

WALTHAM has taken a decided step towards sewerage, and the sewerage commissioners have submitted their report, which has been accepted by the board of alderman, and an order provid-ing for an appropreation of $300,000, to cover the cost of the construction of the during the present month, as it has been ready for some time.

THERE was a remarkably full vote this year, the total for mayor being 3,383, while in the state election the total vote was only 3,284. Last year the total vote was 2,995 in the city election, and in the presidental election the total was 3,601. These figures show that the citizens have a healthy interest in city affairs.

THE school board met last week and transacted routine business, but in the political excitement all the reporters forgot to attend. The committee on super intendent announced that it would pro-bably be able to report in two weeks, by which time they hope to come to an agreeument.

Boston Weekly Journal FOR THE YEAR 1891.

The Paper That Meets the Tastes of Readers of New England

ONE - DOLLAR - A - YEAR, - POSTAGE - INCLUDED.

No weekly paper issued in New England meets the expectations of a wider of readers than the Boston Weekly Journal. It covers so wide a field that all who do not seek after sensational literature and highly colored reports of the worst features of life may open its pages and find in Tra Thirty-Six Long Collums something to interest and amuse. The topics of the day, political, religious and of a business nature, are prominently discussed. It is the aim of the editors that the Journal shall be EDUCATIONAL AS WELL AS ENTERTAINING. In this respect the Journal may claim a just pre-eminence among the weekly newspapers of New England, for it not only proposes to talk about things, but to express opinions which will make doubtful questions clear and open the way for a clearer understanding of the disputed topics of the day. A GREETING TO OLD AND NEW FRIENDS. The Boston Weekly Journal has long enjoyed the deserved reputation of being the representative newspaper of its class in the New England States. It has a constituency second to none in numbers and intelligence, and its each year commanding a wider field of influence. Its success among the reading classes of New England has been due to the liberal policy of its management, to the care and skill employed in tspreparation, to its extensive sources of information, to the variety and timeliness of its contents, and to the acknowledged honesty of its views.

These qualities upon which any newspaper must rely for permanent or worthy success, will

These qualities upon which any newspaper must rely for permanent or worthy success, will characterize it in the future as they have in the past, and it is the confident expectation of its managers that the year to come will witness a better development of it than ever before. No pains or expense will be spared to make it in all respects a newspaper which no man in any degree removed from the gree centres of information can afford to do without.

the great centres of information can afford to do without.

THE ADVANTAGES TO THE READER.

It has never been so well equipped as now for the securing and effective presentation of the facts and (discussion; of the tendencies of the times. With the growth of the country, and the increasing prosperity which may reasonably be expected to accompany it, a good newspaper becomes indispensible to the man who would keep himself informed upon whatever is interesting the world at large. A well conducted journal of the times gives men better knowledge, broader views and keener sympathies, and draws them out of the demands of their individual lives upon a higher plane of thought and feeling.

The Weekly Journal aims to furnish those who have not much time for reading with a full and comprensive digest of the events of the day. Its purposes are to inform men upon the courses of government, politics and business to present the news of the day and to show its tendencies, and to give instructive facts and desirable information. With every resource known to modern journalism at its command, it unhesitatingly asserts its ability to do this, and invites an examination of its claims.

The retiring members are never forgotten by the fire laddles, and the kindly remembranee expressed in this way, is always cherished.

—There can be no doubt that the Hibbard men, who visited the clubhouse, Tuesday evening, were feeling well and entirely satisfied with the political complexion of the city for 1891. This spirit was so generously diffused that it apparently affected some of the men who thought that they voted for the other candidate, and considerably augmented the Hibbard fores. Capt. —Jeremiah Hooley was arraigned in the police court Monday, for manshaughter. Hooley resides in the Thompsonville district, and is 14 years of age. A month ago he was released from the Lyman school in Westboro, where he was sent for larceny. The present charge against Hooley grew out of the shooting affair at Oak Hill on Thanksgiving day, a lad named Albert Groth, 18 years of age, having been fatally shot by the defendant. Mr. Richard M. Saltonstall appeared as counsel for Hooley. It was argued by the defendant, testified that Groth handed him his gun and asked him to hold it while he was getting a drink from a hole cut in the lee of the pond where the shooting took place. "While he was drinking." said Hooley, 'il pointed the gun at Groth and pulled the trigger. It was the first time I had ever held a gun in my hands. There was no capon it, and I thought that it was not loaded. William Sullivan testified: Albert Groth came to the pond, followed by Hooley, for the purpose of getting a drink for head of the shouse. There were easily going around the world, arrived Nov. 28. They were mailed Nov. 4. The party had other schools were represented. Music from a band added to the enjoyment of the poon it, and I thought that it was not loaded. William Sullivan testified: Albert Groth came to the pond, followed by Hooley, for the purpose of getting a drink of water. He kicked a hole in the iee with his boot, and while leaning over to get a drink i head the pond when Groth was shot. I did not see Hooley in the act of firing the gun. Similar testimony was given by James Coveney, Charles Hupprich and other boys who were with Sullivan at the time of the shooting. It was shown from their evidence that Hooley was badly frightened when he realized that he had shot Groth. The court ordered Jeremiah Hooley discharged on the charge of manslaughter, and ordered his recommittal to the Lyman school, his recent release having been probationary.

"But, mamma," began Eleanor, when "But, mamma, began Leanor, when Mrs. Northcote went on earnesstly.
"I'm convinced it's the right thing to do. Now, think, Eleanor, of the poetic justice, the inherent nobleness of it."
Again Eleanor was about to speak when Sallie said:

"Tell us once more, please, mamma what it is you're so convinced of?" And her vivacious eyes glanced from her sis-ter's annoyed frown to the enthusiastic glow upon her mother's countenance, while the lurking smile hid itself more carefully.

"Read for yourselves," returned Mrs.
Northcote, "and see the wide range of social and moral, even spiritual power it This German lady and ber daughter whom I've been reading about, people of high rank, Eleanor, change places with their servants every other Sunday, Now, I should not choose Sun-day, because another day would be more convenient to us. But the spirit is perfect. I want to emulate that, and to carry out the plan even down to the details of "Execution is exactly what I feel like," muttered Eleanor. "The trouble is that I can't get at those German creatures to do it. I do wish mamma wouldn't read the newspapers so carefully if this is what it brings us to."

Sallie gave her a warning glance, for Mrs. Northcote had come back from ab-straction and was looking at her. "Yes, girls," she weut on, "every other Sunday they did this. We can take Thursdays, and with this change, which is quite im-material, carry out the plan perfectly. I material, carry out the plan perfect. I am going to do my share. Annie and Christine will enjoy it very much."

"Not a doubt of it," responded Eleanor drily. "As to us, it's no matter."
"But you, my dears," began the lady,

or drily. "As to us, it's no matter."
"But you, my dears," began the lady,
"why—"
"Oh, we shall enjoy it too, mamma," cried Sallie, her dimples broadening to a laugh. "It will be equal to a cooking school. I'd give more than all my old shoes," she added, "to see Eleanor waiting upon the table and washing dishes.
And, then, who knows, she may be destined to marry a poor man and this may be the way of letting her down easy.
She won't mind waiting upon her hus band at all, after she has become used to waiting upon her servants."
Eleanor was too angry to laugh. She wondered if her sister had discovered the preference that she had crowded down to the corner of her proud heart, telling herself that she had stamped it out altogether.

down to the corner of her proud heart, telling herself that she had stamped it out altogether.

Mrs. Northcote went on talking about the noble side of this social problem, interspersing her remarks with practical arrangements for carrying out the theory. After all, the details were simple enough; all that would be required was a complete transposition of mistresses and maids for one day in every fortnight. Eleanor as she listened saw only the breakers ahead, Sallie was already enjoying in fancy Sallie was already enjoying in fancy some of the amusing complications and embarassments to which in her own home the situation would be sure to give

When, soon after, the sisters were alone together, the elder expressed her intention of keeping aloof from any such absurdity. But Sallie laid a hand upon her arm. "Dear mother," she said, "she does take up funny notions, Eleanor; but then they are always so out of the world, so thoroughly original, and so loving. You know we wouldn't swap her for any old formalist; so, we'd better humor her, Nell." The other looked up suddenly, expecting to find in Sallie's eyes the rare emotion she had heard in her voice. These were dancing with fun. "Which emotion she had heard in her voice.

These were dancing with fun. "Which will you be, first or second girl?" she cried.

"They won't know what to do," suggested Eleanor, occupied with the experiment from the opposite point of view.

Sallie laughed out. "It won't take them long to learn," she said.

The Northcotes were very much in society, and although Mrs. Northcote had chosen the day in the week when they were least likely to have interferences with her new plan, still, the daughters knew that the story would probably get out. But, then, everybody was fond of Mrs. Northcote, it was not the young ladies alone who made the house so attractive. Well read, witty, and unselfish, the mother in some eyes outshone her daughters, and her social courage which in her was absolute want of perception that there was anything to be afraid of, was the admiration of those who by no means would have followed her or been obliged to bear the results.

Throughout the week she made ready in varions ways for the coming experiment, chiefly by trying to instruct her daughters in her domestic knowledge, which she was chagrined to find so meagre. "Still we will learn, my dears?" she would repeat consolingly. Eleanor's grave dignity deepened, and Sallie was often found convulsed with laughter outside the door, beyond which the instructions had been going on.

But Wednesday a telegram came for Mrs. Northcote. Her aunt was very ill, and insisted upon seeing her niece immediately. Denial might be bad for her. Mrs. Northcote was distressed to leave her daughters upon the eve of the experiment, but she had no choice. And Sallie refused to put off the day because it had been promised to the servants. "We'll get them up a decent dinner, mamma, "she said, "or what's the use of our Parloae instructions?"

So, Mrs. Northcote departed, not to return for three days.

Annie and Christine, Swedish girls, were embarrassed by the situation. Sallie's merry ways had always pleased them, but they felt the stateliness of Miss Northcote. They could not tima der the circumstances, she could not help wishing that the circumstances had been different; for the younger man was both handsome and distinguished looking, and seemed much disappointed at her answer, so much that after a moment he asked if Miss Northcote and Miss Sallie were in. She heistated, But her natural honesty conquered. Perhaps also, in spite of the awkwardness of the situation, the humor of the thing got the better of her discretion. She added, however, that she believed the ladies were engaged.

The visitors handed their cards with an assurance of welcome that she was not surprised at as she glanced at the names.

"here's our English consin." The longexpected has arrived at this opportune

The dismay on her sister's face watoo much, even for her own mortification; she began to laugh.

"Oh, hush!" cried Eleanor.

"Theywon't hear in the reception room; and if they did, they wouldn't connect us and the kitchen, quite yet."

"So awfully swell," sighed Eleanor.

"You'd say so if you saw them. Mr. Staynor—he's older—is superfine without being of gossamer quality, and Mr. Gresham—Will as we were bold enough to call him across the water, is—I can't tell you except a real thoroughbred."

"Perhaps you imagine you're making things easier to me," returned Eleanor dryl, "What are we going to do?"

"There's nothing left for us at this juncture but to fess, and then wait upon them with the 'ladies' in the parior. They are too much gentlemen to object to any arrangement we make, and, then, Eleanor, I'm not cle r that Mr. Gresham won't get richly paid, he looks as if he knew how to laugh. And they may help us wait, too. And you may be sure it will go down in their note-books as one of the American institutions. Though they will wonder why they never chance upon anybody's else servants' day while they are in the country."

they will wonder why they never chance upon anybody's else servants' day while they are in the country."

Eleanor in her impatience and disgust gave her sister a slight shake. "Can't you ever be serious?" she cried. "I am."

"You mean to tell them?"

"Hobson's choice."

"You shall not."

Sallie put her head on one side in a way she had, and looked at her sister. "What, then?" she asked.

There was a silence. For it was only after serious deliberation and the refusal of Sallie to give up the experiment for that day that Eleanor spoke.

A few minutes later Sallie walked into the reception room.

"Will you come this way?" she said to the strauger. And with an air of being out of the affair as soon as possible ushered them into the drawing room.

"They are bound to despise us either as ignoramuses or as cheats," she thought.

Gresham leaned toward his companion. "What a face," he whispered, "and what tones. A lady. Is this republicanism?"

"It may be democracy," returned the other smiling as he watched Sallie's graceful movements. "But wait a bit, Gresham: you've lost your heat before."

"This time it's my head, too. There is the mistress of Gresham Hall."

"If she consent."

"But do be cautious for the sake of ham; you've lost your heart before.

"This time it's my head, too. There is the mistress of Gresham Hall."

"If she consent."

"Oh, of course."

"But do be cautious for the sake of your rank, and your friends. Wait until you have seen the ladies you have come so far to see."

"Book," Gresham went on in an undertone, for the occupants of the parlor were now coming forward to meet them, two girls fairly dressed, though, as the gentlemen saw; ta glance, without a touch of style. Gresham had an opportunity to confide to his companion that America was the land of puzzles. Christine had fair hair, a delicate complexion and a shyness of manner that, althouth opposed to all that Gresham had imagined as to the social advantages of the Misses Northcote, did not sit badly with her age for she was under twenty. Annie was plain, but more clever than her sister, and Mr. Staynor believed that he should get on best with her. Indeed, Christine was trembling, for the only thug which had made her consent to this part, Miss Northcote's presence and authoritative voice, had given place to a worse trial. Annie, a natural mimic, put on Eleanor's manner with a success that convulsed Sallie from her post of observation. She asked the gentlemen for particulars of their travels with an insistance that threw the burden of the conversation upon them, and dilated upon crowds and inconveniences not only with vivid recollection but in the comforting assurance that by keeping to generalities she was upon safe ground. Her English was not bad and her foreign accent though extremely perplexing to her hearers, not vulgar, and she had the tact to appear to listen with great attention. She enjoyed herself immensely, Eleanor declared. Even Christine at last gained a little courage, and at dinner ventured a few remarks, for which Sallie frowned at her aside, and then repented of what she saw was an unkindness. Not all Mr. Staynor's politeness could conceal at times his wonder. But under the small courteises that the occasion demanded of him Gresham's ity as needful to insure his return, for return he would, although he was not sure how to make his purpose known. Sallie disappeared to urge Eleanor to consent to her telling Mr. Gresham the truth

"I'll just call him one side and 'fess'," she said. "I'll take all the blame and then you shall sail in and play the—no, not play but be the hostess. I'll take a back seat, I promise you." Sallie was sincere, but she did not expect to occupy sincere, but she did not expect to occupy it alone.

But Eleanor was too much moved for her usual reproof of her sister's colloquialisms. "You've a fine role for me," she sneered. "But of course L can't control you; do as your perversity dictates. But leave me out of the affair."

"I can't do that," said the other, "nobody does, you know well enough."

And she turned away impatiently.

The gentlemen were in the hall, having taken leave of their supposed hostesses, and Sallie was about to open the door for them. Gresham was in advance of his companion.

"This has not always been your life?" he said to her in an undertone.

She flushed; but she looked at him and said, "No, I am a first-class fraud."

Both her hearers stared at her speechless, and more than ever impressed with the utter foreignness of everything in the country. Sallie's dimples came back in double force. But she shut her lips and opened the door. The gentlemen, however, did not go out immediately, for, on the threshold preparing to make her presence known, stood Mrs. Northout.

"Your aunt had taken a new freak and for, on the threshold preparing to make her presence known, stood Mrs. Northcote.

"Your aunt had taken a new freak and wouldn't see me after all, Sallie, dear," she said, kissing her daughter, "so I came home at once. How has the new arrangement worked? But first, these gentlemen? I need not be told that this is Mr. Gresham," to the younger, "you look so like your uncle, Arthur Howe. But come in, both of you. Were they interested in our experiment, Sallie?" she added as Gresham's immediate compliance gave his companion no chance for remonstrance.

"In yours, you mean? N—o. We didn't say anything about it."
Mrs. Northcote's amazement gave place to a smile. "Eleanor's doing, I'm sure," she said.

Sallie turned the conversation. Gresham, radiant, looked at her.

Soon she slipped away and brought in her sister, "You may just as well face it," she said, "Mamma is telling all about it, and wishing everybody would do likewise. She's so consistent that she has taken them into the morning room to our mistresses. Oh, poor Christine! It was too funny." She stood silent a moment and then turning away slightly from Eleanor, added slowly, "I don't think it will turn out badly, sister."

FRACES C. SHARHAWK.

To the Editor of the Graphic

A few words in reply to Mr. Fiske's letter in your last issue, will, I trust, be pardoned. The writer does not object to the title of Mugwump or Independent, but he does object to the title of renegade, traitor and deserter, on account of any political course he may take. It is quite time that citizens should cease to look upon political parties as armies to which they owe unfaltering allegiance regard-iess of the principles which the party leaders may put forth, and of the charac-ter of the men whom they may nominate for high offices. For one, the writer prefers to do some of his own thinking, and he rejoices that our friend so frankly avows his dissatisfaction with the course of the Republican leaders, and asserthis intention to join the new party which we all hope soon to see organized in the interests of a better government. Mugwumps have all passed through the various stages of silent dissatisfaction, open remonstrance and final revolt which our friend is just beginning to experience. We were all once, earnest and ardent Republicans, and very reluctantly ardent Republicans, and very reluctantly and sorrowfully left the party in whose past we have gloried as much as our friend. We were all afraid to trust the Democratic party, and for years listened to the siren song of "Reform within the party." One by one, each according to his own light, we have seen the folly of trusting party leaders who for years have made promises but to break them, when once in office. We have watched the Democrate party for 16 years, and have seen it year by year improving in leadership, and advocating sounder principles of government. During that time we have seen the Republican leaders by questionable means seat a President, whose administration they scoffed at and derided, although the most creditable which we had had since Lincoln's death. We have seen them refuse the nomination to another, who, raised to the Presidential chair by the untimely death of his superior, had given to the country a wise and patriotic administration, and nominate one charged with bribery while in a high position of trust, and had resigned the position in the midst of his trial without awaiting the verdict of his peers as to his guilt or innocence; and we have been brazenly told that it was nobody's business whether he was innocent or guilty. We have heard the Republican leader of the Senate of the United States declare that the Decalogue and Golden Rule have no place in politics. We have heard a Vice-President elect, rejoice in the successful use of "soap," and we have seen the man whose successful use of "soap," and we have seen the man whose successful use of "soap," and we have seen the man whose successful use of "soap," and we have seen the man whose successful use of "soap," and we have seen the man whose successful elect, respond to the security of the successful one presidential election, secure another by the use and sorrowfully left the party in whose that there was anything to be afraid on means would have followed her or feem obliged to bear the results.

Throughout the week he made ready and the respondence of the control of the co should be found and will be found

should be found and will be found for violence, as well as corruption, at the polls. But to imitate the political methods of the Napoleous, little and great, and put it in the power of the central government to place in the hands of its tools the control of elections in every polling precinct in the country, is a tremendous stride towards imperialism, and is an open avowal that the people are incapable of self-government.

I believe that the stories of Southern outrages are grossly exaggerated for political effect. Can any one doubt that the present Republican leaders are capable of exaggerating, not to say of inventing those tales of horror which they so industriously circulate just prior to every election? Is the purity of purpose of these political saints so unquestionable that we must believe all the charges which they bring against their opponents? That there has been much wrong at the South no one doubts, that these outrages are becoming less and less frequent every year, no observing man can deny. How many years is it since in the city of Boston it was not safe to speak, except with bated breath, in favor of the abolition of slavery? How long is it since in the same city of Roston the court house was surrounded with chains and patrolled by a file of U. S. soldiers to prevent the rescue of a fugitive whom a U. S. commissioner was remanding to slavery? Massachusetts has improved; so will the South, and no one who has watched the improvement she has male, can doubt that she will eventually and at no distant day solve the momentous problem which was imposed upon her by the errors of the reconstruction period, especially by the immediate enfranchisement of a whole people, ignorant and degraded by centuries of slavery, without any safe-guards against the dangers thus incurred. Il we cannot aid them in solving the problem, let us at least not against the pauper and downtrodden labor of foreign lands. Second, they believe in the problem controlled, in the Republican party back to power. It seems to me that he ut cultured scoundrel who never voted any other ticket

Our friend errs when he says that the Democratic party contains every Free Trader in the land, as there are gentlemen in this very city who are avowed Free Traders and yet vote the straight Republican ticket. The Democratic party does not advocate Free Trade, but does favor a sensible and economic adjustment of the tariff, which shall really protect American industries and shall not cramp, cripple and destroy them as the McKinley monstrosity bids fair to do, if it remains upon the statute books.

If the returns from the West have any significance for us, it is to prepare for the new party which the great upheaval there would indicate must be organized upon the ruins of the Republican party which seems long ago to have accomplished its mission, and now for these many years, simply to have been outliving its usefulness for the ignoble purpose of distributing the spoils. Our friend may see his way clear to join a new party at a much earlier date than he now anticipates.

THE FORUM FOR DECEMBER.

THE FORUM FOR DECEMBER.

The December number of the Forum contains an article on "The Government of American Cities," by Andrew D. White, wherein he shows that the weak-est point of American government is in the management of municipal affairs. He points out in what specific ways we fall far short of the European government in this particular. Mr. White has endeavored to make a thorough analysis of the subject, and he indicates a remedy as well as the cause of evil.

Jules Simon, of the French Senate, contributes an article on "The Stability of the French Republic." President Eliot, of Harvard, writes of "Family Stocks in a Democracy."

President W. A. P. Martin, of the Royal Tung Weng College, China, writes, with the experience of long residence in the Celestial Kingdom, about the supposed danger of China's competition with Western nations He finds no "menace" in the Chinese, and he points out the astonishing fact that there are great provinces of Chinese territory yet so sparely settled that they are making efforts to induce immigrants.

Representative W. M. Springer publises results of the census, some of which have not before been made public, showing the ratio of the increase in population in cities and in rural districts in several parts of the country.

The autobigraphical essay this month is by Archdeacon Farrar, who writes of the "Formative Influences" in his own life.

Other essays in this number are: "The Humanities," Major J. W. Powell; "Pity, The Municities," Major J. W. Powell; "Pity, The March President President life. Other essays in this number are: "The Humanities," Major J. W. Powell; "Pity, Genuine and Spurious," Francis Power Cobbe; "Armor for Warships," Commander F. M. Barber; "Notes on Ghosts," Andrew Lang; "Speed in Railway Travel," Prof. R. H. Thurston.

THE ATLANTIC.

el," Prof. R. H. Thurston.

THE ATLANTIC.

Mr. Stockton's serial, "The House of Martha," goes on merily in the Atlantic for December, and certainly the author is at his bes in hi i d s ripton of the hero's new amanuensis, a nun separated from him by a wire grating, who, after days of irritating silence, is finally induced to speak to him by the appearance of an enraged wasp. The Atlantic is fortunate in securing so clever a serial for the new year. With its short stories from Rudyard Kipling and Henry James, its papers by Mr. Lowell and Francis Parkman, and hitherto unpublished letters from Charles and Mary Lamb, 1891 will be a redletter year for the magazine. Mr. Birge Harrison gives an account of the new rival of the French salon, the National Society of Fine Arts, in a paper entitled "The New departure in Parisian Art." Margaret Christine Whiting writes about "The wife of Mr. Secretary Pepys," a delightful, gossiping article, with amusing quotations from the immortal Diary. Mr. A. T. Mahan, in "The United States Looking Outward," shows the isolation of the country, not only in respect to position, but in regard to trade; and prophesies a change in public opinion, which will free us from our indifference to foreign nations, and open our eyes to the necessity of the defense of our coasts, and a more active policy of trade with other countries. Dr. Oliver Wender Holmes contributes a two-page poem, called "But One Talent," and a well-known priest of the Episcopal Church reviews Hutton's "Cardinal Newman." Miss Sophia Kirk's pathetic and charming little sketch, called "Heimweh," must not be forgotten; nor should an essay in the Contributors' Club be overlooked, on English and American spelling, from one who, if his name were known, would be recognized as of highest authority.

Houghton, Miffin & Co., Bostou.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

The December Scribner's is an elegantly illustrated holiday number containing no less than seven illustrated articles, in which a remarkable list of artists is represented, including Robert Blum, Domenico Morelli, Harry Furniss, Howard Pyle, A. F. Jacassy, C. D. 'Gibson, W. L. Taylor and W. L. Metcalf. Among the contributions are Sir Edwin Arnold's first paper on Japan; Humphrey Ward's description of the famous London picture salesroom, known as "Christie's;" W. H. Rideing's picturesque account of Amy Robsart's country; A. F. Jacassy's article on a great contemporary artist—Domenico Moreli; and three short stories, which in feeling and motive are well suited to the Christmas season. Their authors—Octave'I hanet, Richard Harding Davis and George A. Hibbard—are well known to the readers' of Scribner's, in which for the most part their work appears. The poems of the issue include Helen Leah Reed's Sargent prize translation of Horace, Book Ill., Ode XXIX, (won by her over 16 male competitors in Harvard University); and contributions by Richard Henry Stoddard, Duncan Campbell Scott and James Herbert Morse. One of the articles which will attract wide attention is Sir Edwin Arnold's, who, in the present paper, gives a very interesting account of Japan.

As the holiday season approaches, it brings with it an abundance of Christmas editions, and among these none is more worthy of notice than the December number of Harper's Magazine. The cover is white, suggestively ornamented with designs and lettering in gilt. And the contents of the magazine well entitle it to especial consideration. "The Comedies of Shakespeare," with comments by Andrew Lang and illustrations by E. A. Abbey, has "As You Like It' for this number, and the old play gains a new charm from Abbey's clever drawings and Mr. Lang's thoughtful comment. Charles Dudley Warner continues the description of Southern California under the title of "The Winter of Our Content." There are six short stories, ""A Christmas Present," by Paul Hayse; "Flute and Violin," by James Lane Allen; "Plaski's Tournament." by Thomas Nelson Page; "Gibble Colt's Ducks," by R. M. Johnston; "Jim's Little Woman," by Sarah Orne Jowett; and "A speaking Ghost," by Annie Fleids. "The Editor's Easy Chair' writes about Christmas, and the other departments of the magazine are of more than usual interest. HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

ST. NICHOLAS.

The December number of St. Nicholas has for frontispiece Rembrandt's wonderful portrait of himself, engraved by T. Johnson. This portrait is referred to in Mrs. Dodge's account of Holland and its strange features. Another important contribution is "The Story of the Golden Fleece," retold for American boys and girls by Andrew Lang, with illustrations by Birch—this number containing the introduction only. The number is of even merit and well-sustained excellence.

Caucer Can be Cured and by Dr James M Solomon, Jr., 75 Court St., Boston, Muss.

Boston, Mass.

Boston, Aug, 26, 1890
Dr. Solomon has cured a cancer on my lip of seventeen years standing, it was cut out twice by what they call emin nt surgeons at intervals of six years, after being cut out each time I knew by the feeling it was still there, and it would be now if I had not been so fortunate as to have Dr. Solomon treat it, he did it without any cutting. I would urge those afflicted with cancer not to delay but go at once and be cured permanently as I have done. My dear Doctor I thank from the bottom of my heart,

I have tried them, and they have only swindled me. I have figured up what they cost me for the last four years, it was just $254.31. If I had it now it would be a fortune for me. This year my bill for medicine was only five dollars, for which I purchased six bottles of Sulphur Bitters. They cured me of Serofula after suffering four years.—P. J. Cummings, Troy, N. Y.

Of buying worthless medicines, and spending money on quack docters whose only idea is to medicine like Sulphur Bitters? I think so, as they cured me of Catarrh after suffering three years.—P. F. Clark, Manchester.

BEAUTIFUL BELLEEK PORCELAIN.

A. Shuman of Boston, during his visit to Ireland last summer, selected for his own use three complete sets of Irish porcelain, known as Belleek ware. He has just received them by a late steamer. They consist of a breakfast, dinner and supper service. After a minute inspection we feel safe in saying that it is doubtful if there is! today in this country anything in pottery, for beauty of design, delicacy of tint and perfect fluish, to excel these products of the obscure Irish village of Belleek. Airanged before the beholder, these exquisite specimens appear like a poem in ceramic art.

The executive session was rather protracted and it is said that one member favored laying over the appointment for one week, and opposed rushing it through so wear the end of the present administration, but he was voted down.

Orders were adopted authorizing the transfer of $1400 from the appropriation for gravel lands to the appropriation for gravel lands to the appropriation for street crossings; requesting the mayor to petition the General Court to amend the law authorizing the collection of assessments for street watering; transferring $2261 received from the sale of crushed stone to the appropriation for general highways repairs.

THE SEWERAGE REPORT.

Alderman Harbach presented the plans and system given in detail by the City Engineer, and recommended that it be adopted. The committee also presented a majority report, recommending that the cost of the collecting system be assessed upon the owners of abutting estates upon the following basis: Four-sentles of the benefit according to the relative frontage and six-tenths according to the area of the estates within 180 feet of the street in which the sewer has been constructed; provided, that upon corner lots, the first 60 feet of frontage upon the second street in which the sewer is constructed, shall be exempt, and no area assessed upon the first street shall be assessed upon the first street. The said 4 10ths, having been ascertained to be 60 cents per front foot, and the 410ths having been ascertained to be 60 cents per front foot, and the 410ths having been ascertained to be 60 cents per front foot, and the 610ths having been ascertained to be 60 cents per front foot, and the 610ths having been ascertained to be 60 cents per front foot, and the 610ths having been ascertained to assessment.

The committee recommend that the city assume the cost of maintenance; the proportionate cost of the surface drainace system.

The solution of the question of pay-city engineer noves 's plans.

The plans submitted by the City Engineer cover 20 or more type-written pages of legal cap, and are summarized as follows: Mr. Noves has had the assistance of Mr. Edward A. Buss, a competent civil engineer of Boston, who was formerly assistant engineer when the water works was put into Newton, and also assistant for Mr. Edward Sawyer, when plans for sewerage were drawn up in 1878; consultation has also been had with Rudolph Hering, city engineer of New York, and Eitot C. Clarke, of Boston. He also described surface, house and subsoid drainage. The plan proposed, provides for a sub-soil drain immediately below the house sewer, which will have branches connecting with the cellar of the houses, to be put in at the same time as connections with the sewer. Be subsoil drain will have open joints and will take the water along the line of the sewer, and reduce in some measure the cost of the construction of the sewer, by making a smaller sewer answer every purpose. The sub-soil drain will be discharged into brooks. The metropolitan sewer will answer every purpose for many years, but ultimately a high-level intercepting sewer will be needed. The topography of the city allows of the sewerage being conveyed from all parts of the city to the metropolitan sewer, except a portion of land south of Kenrick street and west of Waverly avenue, and South street and the lower portion of the Southast part of Oak Hill can also be best drained through Brookline or West Roxbury. It is recommended also that the dow land in Lower Falls be sewered by having an electric motor or small water motor pump the sewage up into the main sewer.

The plan provides for three connections with the Metropolitan intercepting sewer, one near the mouth of Hyde's (sometimes known as Lemon's Brook), which is to take the sewage from that portion of Wards 1 and 7 east of Boyd's Pond, Jewett street, Walnut park and Bellevue street, and north of Lombard. Sargent, Cotton and Wards treet, and provide for taking the sewage from a total

The sewers will mostly be laid 81-2 feet below the street level, Arrangements are provided for flushing, ventilation, and the report goes into details of construction, etc., with great minuteness, making a rather formidable document, which is to be printed for the convenience of the members of the City Council.

City Engineer Noyes's report was not read but was received in both branches and will be taken up and discussed at a later date.

THE GAMEWELL INVESTIGATION. The special committee on the investi-gation of the Gamewell Police Signal system, President Hyde, Messrs. Mead, Dutch and Richardson made the follow-

The said 4 10ths, having been ascertached be obe cents per front foot, and the 4 10ths having been ascertained to well the second street. casily remedy; in fact, while the maintenance and care are properly in his hands, and as he has not yet found any trouble which he considers worth reporting, either to those in authority, or to the Gamewell Company, we conclude that any further investigation on our part would be useless, and while, as we have said, there have arisen some complaints from apparent defects; we, your committee, are of the unanimous opinions that the system is a good one; that the defects are not in the apparatus, but the failure on the part of those in charge to give it intelligent care, with a v.ew to its successful working. If it were in the province of this committee to make recommendations, we would suggest that the system be first rescued from the condition into which, through neglect, it has been allowed to fall, and that it receive the same watchful, intelligent care which our present excellent fire alarm system receives. This being done, we have no doubt that not only will all complaints cease, but then we shall have a police signal system, equal not only to our fire alarm system but one that will reflect credit on the city.

A SPICY DEBATE.

Councilman Hyde said the committee had given all parties a fair hearing. They had invited the Police Committee and the Mayor, the officers of the Gamewell Company, and asked Alderman Johnson to have all the policemen in the station to be perfectly fair and to get at all the facts. For his part he thought the report should be even stronger. The matter had been before the city government long enough and he thought it was time it was dropped. They had found out that Chief Bixby was the one officer who knew how to manage it, and he had said there would be no difficulty if the system was properly managed, but it was hard work to find out just who did manage the system. If the Common Council had a representation on the police committee they could enforce their recommendations, but as it was they could do nothing, but report, and all must admit that their report was fair and it was a unanimous report.

Councilman Forknall asked what was meant by "rescued from present condition."

President Hyde said we found orders had been given not to keep the system

f tion."

President Hyde said we found orders had been given not to keep the system in running order, during the investigation, but to leave all defects just as they were, except the wires and batteries. He thought no electric system that had run nine days without care was in any condition to be investigated.

Councilman Mead said orders had been given not to touch the system while the committee was investigating.

Councilman Forknall asked if any box could not be used, who would be blamed, the officers, the system or the committee.

President Hyde said probably the Common Council committee!

Councilman Hall asked what was meant by the committee being refused keys.

President Hyde said that Marshal Richardson had told him, that he had orders not to deliver any keys.

Councilman Dutch said it was a matter of surprise that the system had been let go at such loose ends. None of the police officers had been given any instruction as to the running of it, and if anything got out of order the system was blamed. We pay men good salaries and yet they are called on to do. The orders about the keys came of course from the upper branch.

Councilman Richardson said he endorsed every word in the report, only it was not strong enough.

Councilman Mead said the sergeant was asked how the telephone worked, and he said it worked as well as any telephone. He also said the wagon calls often missed, but when he was cross-questioned he could only give four instances in which the calls had not worked since last July. He said the duty calls worked badly, and once last fall that 22 of 80 had missed. He could not tell what circuit it was on, and made no report. The committee could find no record that had been kept of the workings of the system, the men were required to report to no one, and there seemed to be no head to the management of the system.

President Hyde said complaint was made of the time stamp, but it only needed regulating. Chier Bixby said he had never been called on to regulate anything that he had not succeeded in makin

They See The Reason.

Some of the prominent Republicans of the NorthWest know what beat them, and are talking freely about it. Mr. Charles A. Pilsbury of Minneapolis, the great miller, and a leading Republican, is very emphatic in his denunciation of the McKinley bill. He says the Republicans expected a revision of the tariff downward, instead of upward and the result of the election shows that they think they have been fooled. Such newspapers as the Chicago Tribune, the St. Paul Pioneer Press, and the Minneapolis Journal, do not mince matters, but say that the McKinley tariff defeated the Republicans, and urge upon Congress the necessity of a revision while the Republicans are in power. We regret that we see no evidence of a like wisdom in this section among the Republican organs. They all took ferward to the entire satisfaction of the people two years hence when they will be accustomed to being skinned alive. very emphatic in his denunciation of the

He is simply saying, 'If you give me a certain duty, you put it in my power to charge over that duty as an additional tax on the farmers of the United States. These manufacturers were not willing to enlarge their production and thereby meet the entire American demand, but preferred to manufacture a limited supply at enormously increased profits, and that, I think, is a feature of the iron manufacture in this country to a very considerable extent. New England and the Tariff on Coal.

New England and the Tariff on Coal.

New England has no available coal deposits. All the coal, therefore, which she consumes must either be imported or shipped from mines in Pennsylvania, Mary land, and Virginia. The annual comsumption of bituminous coal in New England is not known, but the amount of coal shipped to Boston by water has been estimated by the correspondent of the Engineering and Mining Journal to be about 1,000,000 gross tons. In addition to this, large shipments are made by rail. During 1880 the average price paid for bituminous coal f. o. b. at Baltimore was $2.50 per ton, and the rate of freight varied from $1.15 to $1.60 per ton, or an average for the year of $1.35; so that with shipping and port charges coal cost in . Boston Harbor from $3.80 to $4 per ton. The items of this cost are(1) cost of mining, 51 to 56 cents; (2) other expenses at mine, 20 to 24 cents; and (3) freight and shipping charges from mine to Boston, about $2.60; leaving (4) from 40 to 60 cents profit for mining and selling.

What coal from Nova Scotia can be delivered for in New England is shown by the following letter, sent in reply to an inquiry made as to the actual cost of coal delivered on board ships from the mines in Nova Scotia and of the transportation to Boston.

Hon. J. W. Longley, Att'y Gen., Hallfax, N. S.
DEAR SHI: In answer to your inquiry as to the cost of producing a ton of merchantable coal to the port of shipment in Cape Breton, and the cost of transporting that coal to Boston. I beg to submit the following facts which were obtained from several leading mine managers and others familiar with this trade.

COST OF PRODUCTION.

others familiar with this crade.

Cost of Production.

In the County of Cape Breton we have nine coal mines in active operation, which are capable of producing 2,000,000 tons annually. The output last year was about 1,000,000 tons. This was owing to similar wasket.

about 1,000,000 tons. This was owing to a limited market.

Merchantable coal can be delivered f. o. b. at any of Cape Breton coal ports for $1 per ton of 2240 lbs.

Our Cape Breton coal companies make annual contracts for delivery of large quantities of coal at Montreal, and this year they have agreed to deliver about $35,000 tons there at the average price of $3,16 delivered. When freight and other charges are deducted from this, the coal companies receive about $1.40 per ton net for their coal.

COST OF TRANSPORTATION.

COST OF TRANSPORTATION.

Almost the entire quantity of coal sent to Montreal is carried by cargo steamers specially chartered for the purpose. from Montreal to the Cape Breton ports is $50 miles. The steamers average two and a half trips per month.

The distance between Cape Breton and Boston is $50 miles. The average cargo steamer getting the same dispatch loading and discharging as those in the Montreal trade would make at least a half trip more per month running between Cape Breton and Boston and Cape Breton and Montreal. Taking the coal freights to Montreal as a basis, coal can be freighted from Cape Breton to Boston by steamers for $1 per ton.

The above estimate includes port charges, etc., and bunker coal used by steamers.

The following resolutions on the death of Mr. Chas. Edward Parker, were passed by a unanimous vote at the last meeting of the school board.

Wheraes, since our last meeting the intelligence has reached us. of the death of Mr. Charles E. Parker, an honored member of this board for years, therefore:—Resolved, that we hereby place on record our high estimate of our late associate for his many virtues and our deepregret for the close of his long and useful career. We honor his memory for that conscientious devotion to duty which led him to the regular meetings of this board even when suffering from bodily pain and conscious that he was in the grasp of fatal disease.

We would honor him for the amiable and quiet virtues not less to be admired because they shun the public eye and bless only the domestic and social circles which are their appropriate field.

Resolved, that we deeply sympathize with the bereaved widow and family in their great affliction in this loss of husband and father.

Resolved, that the secretary of the board send a copy of these resolutions to the family.

No one would think of feeding an infant on beef or mutton, yet the use of farinaceous foods is scarcely less detrimental to the life and health of the little ones. Mellin's Food is so prepared that it is readily assimilated by the youngest child and forms the only reliable sub-stitute for mother's milk.

For Revenue Only.

For Revenue Only.

King Kalakaua's visit to this country has a distinctly commercial purpose, if current rumor may be believed. He and the sugar producers of his island kingdom have been reading our new tariff and have discovered that a fat bounty is to be paid to American producers of sugar. Why not become American? Why not sell the kingdom outright to Uncle Sam on his pecket for $5,000,000 a year or thereabouts as bounty for sugar of "native" production? Think of the in-ordinate assurance of a people who want to be paid for coming in, when their new-found "patriotism" is for revenue only!

An interesting game in the Newton club bowling tournament was played at the Newton clubhouse Monday evening between teams 9 and 10. The best individual scores were made by Mandell and Follett of team 10. Team 10 won the match by 10 pins. The score is appended.

SEWERAGE AT LAST.

It begins to look as though Newton at begins to, look as though Assword would soon have a sewerage system. A woluminous report on the matter has been drawn up by the City Engineer, which has the approval of Mr. Edward A. Russ, an engineer of Boston, of Mr. E. C. Clark, the engineer of the Drainage Commission, and other competent en-gineers. The Sewerage Committee of the City Council has presented their recute City Council has presented their report, favoring immediate action on the question, recommending a method of assessment, by both a majority and minority report, and also the appropriation of $400,000 as a starter.

This looks like business, and it will stratify those who have long sean the gratify those who have long seen the Pressing need of some system of sewer-age in the city, the lack of which was the greatest obstacle to further growth. The Gity Council concluded on Monday night That it was better to take time to think such an important matter over, and there is certainly no need of undue haste, as mothing can be done for a month or two. The system proposed should be thor-oughly discussed, and ample time given the find out just what is proposed to be done. The next mayor and city council are fully committed on the question of sewerage, and even if the plans are not adopted till next year nothing would be lost. If there was any chance of failure, however, people generally would favor immediate action.

The meeting at the Newton Club House, Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Emergency and Hygiene association, brought out more clearly the need of sewerage, and the plans proposed were explained at length by City Engineer Noyes. Mr. E. C. Clark seemed to think that the building of city sewers was a wery simple matter, which any engineer familar with the lay of the land could arrange for, the only difficulty being with the main sewer and disposal of the sewage. Happily the Metropolitan sys-sem provides for that and all Newton has to do is to build the branch lines.

There seems to be no reason why Wards One, Two and Seven should not have sewers built by a year from this time, and connected with the Metropolistan system, and the health of the city greatly improved thereby.

SUPERINTENDENT OF STREETS.

While all acknowledge the excellence of the appointment of Mr. Charles W. Bloss as superintendent of streets, there as a good deal of surprise that the apmointment should have been made so mear the end of the year, when the office has been left vacant for over three months. Some argue that this was Bardly courteous to the Mayor-elect, to hasten after the election to appoint one of his chief officials.

But it is probable that no discourtesy was intended, but rather the reverse.

Mayor Burr knows what a serious discomfortit is to be beseiged in regard to such an important position, and that some were bound to be disappointed, whoever was appointed, and in order that the next Mayor might enter upon this administration without danger of making enemies at the start, he has volantarily shouldered all the responsibil-aity, and has endeavored to find a man who would be acceptable to all parties.

There is no doubt that Mr. Ross will make a very capable superintendent, and the Trustees of the Cemetery have learn-end of the appointment with great regret. He was not allowed to resign his position as assistant superintendent of the Cemetery without a struggle, as the Trustees regarded him as exceptionally well fitted for his present positon, and would make it an object for him to remain at is in many respect a very pleasant sesition, and preferable to a city office, where it will be almost impossible to satisfy the public. Nevertheless, if any cane can do that, it is Mr. Ross, and he is sesides familiar with city affairs, having served several terms in the Common Council and been a member of the high-

The Aldermen are confident that he will save more than the addition to the salary, in his management of the streets, and they say that nothing less than $2.500 would have tempte Ross to consider the offer. Whether it is wise to make sider the offer. Whether it is wise to make such a long jump in the salary attached to one office is another question, for such things are apt to produce dissatisfaction in those holding other offices, and lead to a still further increase. The appointment was a great surprise, as the public generally expected that Mr. Stuart send he promoted to the action as weald be promoted to the position, as was shown by the large vote he received in the Graphic, some weeks ago.

defeat of Mr. Barnard, writes in another column on the evils of partisanship in ward caucuses. He asks the same ques-tion that many others have asked, why the Republican caucus in Ward Three objected to Mr. Barnard? One of the leaders of Ward Three politics told the writer that he objected to Mr. Barnard cause he ran against and defeated Mr. Walton three years ago. Perhaps there are others as ill-informed about local history as this gentleman. A reefrence to the back files of the GRAPHIC shows that in 1887, the famous "non-partisan" year, Messrs. Barnard and Walton were the candidates of the non-partisans or Republicans, and that Mr. Barnard and Mrs. Davis were the candidates of the itizens' party, which was victorous onsequently it was Mrs. Davis who defeated Mr. Walton, and those who voted against Mr. Barnard to punish him for that act, punished the wrong person, as Mr. Barnard was in 1887 on both tickets. Of course as the election is now over, all attempts to stir up bad feeling should cease, as we have got to make the best of it, but it would be decidedly interesting to know just what were the grounds on which the Ward Three caucus voted against him, or if the alleged fact that he "ran against Mr. Walton" was the only one that can be stated publicly.

THE Common Council committee of investigation gave a very outspoken report in regard to the Gamewell Police report in regard to the Gamewell Police Signal System, and they charge that everything has been run with very loose ends, no report being kept of the working of the system. Their report of the testimony of Chief Bixby of the Fire Department, who keeps the fire alarm system in such excellent shape, of the difficulties they met with in obtaining keys, and getting at any facts, makes very entertaining reading. The Graphic has all along maintained that the Gamewell police signal system was all right, if well police signal system was all right, if it was carefully managed, and the report it was carefully managed, and the report of the Common Council committee seems to sustain this opinion. Of course, any electric system that is not managed carefully, and looked after in all its details, is of no earthly use. Any one who has a telephone in his house or of-fice, knows how carefully the telephone service has to be looked after, by expert electricians, and a police signal system is a much more complicated affair, and therefore would need even greater care, if it is to work satisfacterily.

THE recount of votes for Mayor furnished a tedious job for the aldermen, but it will satisfy people that the ward counters do their work with remarkable correct ness. It is a natural supposition that mistakes may happen in the hurry of election night, but the recounts both in Newton and elsewhere this year show that they never do, to an extent that has any decided effect on the result. If a candidate wins by a score of votes on the first returns, he is generally safe, no matter how many recounts are made.

The McKinley bill is not wholly to blame for the exceedingly high price of potatoes and apples, although it helps to elevate them. There was a very short crop and potatoes are rotting badly, and this added to the duty makes them most too expensive to eat. Apples are scarce, and the duty adds to the price, while eggs have gone up out of sight, the duty keeping eggs from the provinces out of the market. It was certainly a bad year to pass any bill which would increase prices already too high for comfort.

THE result of the Boston election was THE result of the Boston election was hardly a surprise, although no one expected such a large majority for Mr. Matthews. The Republican candidate was not supported by the Republican organs, and the Republican voters followed their example. With the Australian ballot and the growing habit of independent voting, no party can afford to nominate a weak candidate. Mr. Matthews ought to make an excellent mayor and his friends are confident that he will.

DEATH OF REV. D. H. TAYLOR.

KETCH OF HIS MINISTERIAL LABORS IN NEWTON AND ELSEWHERE.

Rev. David H. Taylor died at 7,30 o'clock Wednesday morning, after a very short illness of typhoid pneumonia, at his residence on Walnut street, Newtonville.

The primary cause of his sickness is attributed to overwork, followed by a severe cold, which developed into pneumonia. A week ago Tuesday evening the deceased attended a lecture given by Rev. Mr. Gunsaulus, a former pastor of the Central Congregational church, in Tremont Temple, Boston, and on the following evening, although suffering physically, he lectured to the young people in his own church. Upon returning home after the lecture, he had a severe chill, followed by more serious symptons.

The deceased was a native of New Brunswick, and was 43 years of age. When in his 16th year, he went to Connecticut and graduated from the Suffield Academy. He subsequently graduated from Brown University and the Rochester Theological Seminary.

He was first settled as pastor over the Calvary Baptist church, Salem. He was called to the pastorate of the Jamaica Plann Baptist church a few years later, where he continued his ministerial labors for 10 years, resigning at the expiration of that time to accept a call to the pastorate of the Central Baptist church, Norwich, Ct., where he remained three years.

While in Norwich he chauged his The primary cause of his sickness is at-torate of the Central Baptist church, Norwich, Ct., where he remained three years.

While in Norwich he changed his views on some doctrinal points, and changed his labors to the Congregational denomination, resigning as pastor of the Central Baptist church.

Last March he accepted a unanimous call to the pastorate of the Central Congregational, Newtonville, succeeding Rev. Pleasant Hunter.

In his relations as pastor here, Rev. Mr. Taylor won the love of his parishioners and the esteem and friendship of the people of all shades of religious opinion. He was a forcible and eloquent preacher, a genial friend and counsellor, and a loving husband and father. He was a zealous worker, especially thoughtful for the poor, and his active labors of the past few months, it is thought, affected his health, rendering him more susceptible to the attacks of disease.

A widow and two daughters survive him. The funeral will take place from the Central Congregational church to-morrow afternoon at 1.30 o'clook.

—A correspondent sends the following on the death of Rev. D. H. Taylor: Again the pulpit of the Central Congregational church is vacant. This time it is death has entered our midst, and taken from us our pastor, just as we had learned to appreciate and love him. We had hoped so much entered our midst, and taken from us our pastor, just as we had learned to appreciate and love him. We had hoped so much from his ministry, his vigorous aggressive Christianity; his absolute honesty and his gentle kindness had wrought in us during the few short months of our life to-gether, a consciousness of perfect security and growing strength. In him was a leader to follow, a pastor to reverence and a man to love. Many there are who will miss that warm hand clasp and genial smile, which bespoke the great heart within. Gifted as he was with a wonderfully clear conception of beauty in all its phases, his sermons have often been replete with the most exquisite bits of description, while they have never failed by their cloquent force to interest, instruct and clevate his hearers. Personally he was a man of great magnetism. Sympathetic to the fullest degree and blest with a large fund of humor, his company was slways sought. With a keen enjoyment of everything worthy to be enjoyed, he was doubly qualified to love and be loved. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to those at his own fireside. What he must have been to them we can judge from what he was to us. His memory will be cherisheh as long as our church lives, and the sweet, ennobling influence of such a life can never be lost.

Gratifying to all.

DER ALTE CHAPERON.

They all thought he was a fool; but then they often make mistakes like that. Kangaroos can't jump like women when the women are jumping to conclusi the women are jumping to concusions. You see, the trouble was that Collis Beattie—Collie they called him when they wanted to be funny—did not have much to say. He used to lie about the hotel veranda in a big steamer chair and read novels. He wore a yachting suit and cap and a silk shirt. He did not look a bit salt, because the skin of his face was as white and as smooth as a face was as white and as smooth as a baby's. So they laughed at him for wearing a yachting suit. All the other fellow's wore them because it was a yachting port upon the Sound, and pretty much every one went in for sailing which was about all there was to do at the place. Collie went sailing once or twice when some generous fellow took pity on him and invited him. Then the women laughed at him more, Then the women laughed at him more, and in strange German called him Der Alte Chaperon—the Old Chaperon—because he always went down into the cabin, streched himself on a locker, and fell asleep. They said he was afraid the spray would spoil his complexion.

Collie didn't seem to know that he was being laughed at. If he did know it, he did not mind it. He never said anything, but went on reading novels. German novels, too and he went them. man novels, too; and he read them in the original. It was most exasperating. What business had a man at a gay, active summer resort to wear nautical toggery, have a skin like a Queen's baby, and read German novels! Once some one said to him:-

"Come and play a game of billiards." "Thank you,,' he replied "It's a lit-tle too much for me you know."

"Thank you," he replied "It's a little too much for me you know."

He certainly was a fool—and a lazy one, too. They tried him on several things, but he lay in the steamer chair and read German. And there were at least six beautiful girls in the hotel. And every one of them had been piqued into trying to interest him. But he just staid in the steamer chair and read German, or went to sleep in the cabin of the yacht. He didn't get seasick. They remembered that, after he was gone, as one of his good qualities. They had him out one day when it blew fresh and there was a lively sea on, but he went to sleep like a rocked infant. He certainly was the most torpid man that ever lived. "Never mind," said Mrs. Bisbee one morning, "Miss Silvers is coming here next week. Perhaps she'll wakehim up," "You don't mean Mattie Silvers, do you?" exclaimed Gertie Greer. "Yes, I do."
"Oh, dear", And Gertie's mouth went down at the corners. "What's the matter with Mattie Silwhat's the matter with Mattie Silvers!" inquired Ethel Brisket.

"Oh, nothing," answered Gertie, dejectedly; "only I was at a place where she was once."

"Well, what of it?" demanded Sybil Yane, that tall, white girl you remember.

"Well," sighed Gertie, "every man in the house dropped right down at her feet."

'Oh, my! is she so very wonderful?"
ked Ethel.

asked Ethel.
"Oh, nothing much." replied Gertie;
"just the most beautiful woman I ever saw, and with two little millions in Ler own right."
There was a mean and the same and

own right."

There was a painful silence, and all the young women looked glum. Gertie was not a girl to be sneezed at, and she used her mirror. Her dejection was ominous. The girls gazed anxiously at Mrs. Bisbee. "I don't want to be disagreeable," she said smoothly, "but I'm afraid it's true." "What's her style?" asked Sybil.

"Brown." replied Mrs. Bisbee, sententiously,

"Brown?"

"Yes, burnt sienna. Burnt sienna hair and eyes, dusky-pink cheeks, dusky-erimson lips, silk-plush complexion—all cream and coax—and two millions from her uncle," said Harold Beaver, who had just come up.

There was a general biting of lips.
"Haven't seen her for three years," he continued, "and—

"Ah! perhaps she has faded!" exclaimed Ethel.
"The dusky browns don't fade much," said Harold,
"No," said Mrs. Bisbee, "I saw her in a box at the Metropolitan last winter, and she was radiant."
"Why, she dosn't belong in New York," Sybil said
"No, Baltimore," responded Harold;

sat up and stared as the tall white girl came below,
"Awfully good of you, you know," he murmured.
"Oh, it's not so very good; but what do you mean?"

"Oh, it's not so very good; but what do you mean?"
"I mean your coming down here to keep me awake." Sybil turned just a trifle pink under the ears. Had he been listening to their conversation on deck? It must have edified him, she thought.
"I came down to keep myself awake." she said hastily, and then added, inconsistently: "Why don't you go on deck and enjoy the breeze?"
"Because I can't enjoy the breeze," he answered.
"It's too strong for you, I suppose," said Sybil, with a touch of scorn.
"Yes, much too strong."
"Makes you chilly."
"Yes, much too strong."
"Makes you chilly."
"Yes, makes me chilly."
"Your complexion."
"Your complexion."
"Didn't know I had any."
"You'r as white and pink as a baby."
"That's true, but I don't think that's much of a complexion for a man, you know."
"Neither do I. I should think you'd get a little sunburn on you just from shame."

Collie laughed. He seemed to be immensely amused.

Shame."
Collie laughed. He seemed to be immensely amused. He had a fuony way of being amused at things that didn't amuse other people. It was jolly for him, but it made the other people angry. "If you're going to laugh at my conversation, I'm going back to the—the girls," exclaimed Sybil, springing up the steps.

yersation, I'm going back to the—the girls," exclaimed Sybil, springing up the steps.

Collie laughed some more. Then he stretched himself on the cabin locker and laughed again. Next he closed his eyes and smiled. A minute later he was sound asleep. All the women came down and looked at him half an hour later. He didn't seem much to look at. He had deep lines under his eyes when he slept, and a worn appearance. Yet they all looked at him and despised him. He just slept on and didn't mind it.

"Valuable person to have on a yachting excursion, isn't he?" whispered Ethel, with a genuine growl in her pretty voice. "If I had a thing like that for a husband, I'd—but I'd never have one." "Let's go on deck. I do believe it's fallen dead calm," said Mrs. Bisbee.

So it had. The Clover's mast was plum perpendicular. So were her main sail and her jib. The water looked like molasses. And it was seething hot. The skipper said there was going to be a squall, and sent the one sailor, a boy, aloft to furl the topsail. The skipper was right. There was going to be a squall. Big blue black clouds were piling up in the northwest. Lightning played around their lower edges. The skipper said it wouldn't be a bad squall. The Clover would stand it under jib and mainsail. It came along in a few minutes. You could see it strike the water over near the Connecticut shore. It made the surface six shades darker. The girls had their rubber goods on, but the skipper said it would not rain. However, they had heard skippers say that before. The squall came bounding over the sound.

Then, they never knew how it happened, but the boom gave a terrific jump right across the yacht. It hit the skipper on the head and knocked him senseless. The next minute he was haliway over the lee rail, with seven shrieking women pulling at him. The yacht. Was pretty nearly on her beam ends, and the sailor boy was paralyzed.

Then Collie Beattie walked out of the cabin rubbing his eyes.

"Did some one scream?" he asked.

"Oh, look at the useless thing?" cried Ethel,

"On, look at the useless thing!" cried Ethel, tugging at the leg of the skipper's trousers.

Whereupon Collie woke up.

He brushed the women aside like so many flies and pulled the skipper into the cockpit. Then he let go the jib sheet, and the yacht righted partly.

"Here, my lad," he called to the boy, "take the wheel." The boy obeyed, and Collie pulled off his cheeks.

"What's he going to do?" inquired Gertie, awestruck.

"Und knows!" m glad to see him do anything," said Ethel.

"Hard down with your helm!" exclaimed Der Alte Chaperon. "Mrs. Bisbee, you and Miss Sybil please hold the wheel there a minute. "Now, lad, main sheet; in with it!"

Collie and the boy got the main boom trimmed flat as the yacht came up into the wind. The jib flapped madly.

"Right your helm!" cried Collie.

The boy obeyed the order.

"Keep her head to it," was his next order.

continued, "and—""

Better? He must have been sick, then, when he came down.

"Well, sweethears," he replied, laughing, "I have been mending slowly but surely till yesterday, when I hid to do a little work aboard a boat and—"

"But we got caught in a squall and the captain—well, perhaps these young ladies will expiain. Let me introduce you all to my fiancee."
And then the whole crew of them figuratively got right down on their knees and worshipped Der Alte Chaperon.
It isn't much of a story is it? But then it has a moral. Two, maybe.—W. J. Henderson, in New York Times.

JULIE'S LESSON.

Julie sat down on the top step, waiting for mamma to come home. one think of a young squirrel in her gray coat and hat, the especial point of resemblance being the way in which she rolled a big peach stone from one cheek to an-other as she sat there gravely medita-

"Mamma told me to be a very good girl while she was gone. Well, I guess I have been pretty good for me. I don't think there is anything bad enough to tell about, anyway."

"Well, my pet," said a voice just below her, and there was mamma, with a bright smile of welcome, and ever so many bundles, and Julie flew down the steps to meet her.

"What have you in your mouth, dear?"
"A peach stone," said Julie.

"Why, we have no peaches in the house to day. Where did you get it?" Julie hopped around on one foot for a minute, then took the stone from her mouth and began rolling it between her hands in an embarrassed way.

"You see," said she, "Molly and I were "You see," said she, "Monly and I were playing down by Dobson's grocery, and there was a basket of peaches on the sidewalk and Molly said, 'I dare you to grab a peach,' and so, of course, I had to grab it, mamma!"

Mamma's sorrowful face made Julie's own lose a little of its brightness. She sat quietly watching her mamma take off her bonnet and gloves, orly once saying cheerfully, "Now, mamma, dear, it's all right; don't worry about it any more. You see, I have asked God to forgive me, and the man didn't see me, so it's all right?"

Presently mamma sat down and took her little daughter on her lap.

"Julie," she said, "do you remember the other day we saw a young boy in the street, in charge of a policeman, and you asked me what he was being taken away for?"

asked me what he was being taken away for?"
"Yes, mamma."
"What did I tell vou the boy was?"
"A thief," said Julie.
"And what did I say a thief was?"
"Somebody who took what did not belong to him," said Julie with a shocked look on her face. There was a moment's silence, and then Julie burst into tears. "O mamma, I didn't mean to! Can't I ever not be a 'hief again?"
My darling, you can begin all over again. First, you must go to Mr. Dobson, tell him what you did, and pay him for the peach. Then come home and ask God toiforgive you, and He surely will if His little child is truly sorry, as I think she is. And one thing more you must learn, Julie—to be really brave; brave enough to do always what is right. It is never brave or smart to do a thing just because you are dared to do it."
About five minutes later a little gray figure stood in Mr. Dobson's store, watching him weigh out a pound of animal crackers for a little girl.
"Have one, Julie?" he said, kindly, holding out toward her a very mild-looking lion.
Julie shook her head. "No, thank you sir," she said.

Julie shook her head. "No, thank average voter know as to the reason why Mr. Samuel Barnard failed of an er dorsement by the Republicans, but which was given to his colleague, Mrs. Abby Davis? Was there any doubt as to his able and faithful service for the last able and faithful service for the last three years?

The world unfortunately contains too many men who never have an opinion until they see which way the wind blows and then shape their course to please the popular clamor. Mr. Barnard had posi-tive opinions of his own and dared to waintain them. Could this have been maintain them. Could this have been twe opinions of his own and dared to maintain them. Could this have been the reason for dropping a man whose firm independence of action had made him respected by every member of the School Board, with the possible exception of those whose plans Mr. Barnard had possibly upset?

Certainly no intimations of any dissatisfaction had been heard in any quarter and it was supposed by every one not versed in the fine work of the wire-puller that Mr. B. would receive the unanimous endorsement of the Republican caucus of Ward 3, and the subsequent approval of the Republican convention. This brings the matter to the heading of this communication—"The dangerous power of the Party (aucus,")

Pursuant to advertisements in the Newton papers signed by C. Bowditch Coffin, chairman, and H. C. Wood, secretary, some 4200 voters of Newton, who intend to support the Republican candidates" etc.

Out of 641 voters in Ward 3, 21 who invited to meet under this partisan call—"All Republican voters of Newton, who intend to support the Republican candidates" etc.

Out of 631 voters in Ward 3, 21 who were willing to be labelled as straight, undefiled Republicans and to further commit themselves to the support of anyone regardless of qualifications or standing, (provided he secured the regular nomination) assembled in the City hall. It does not require any argument to demonstrate to the most unenlightened citizen that it is easy to "fix things" in a caucus of only 21 in number. The "fixing" in this case was done so easily and quietly that no intimation of this neat piece of "peanur politics" reached the ears of parties in West Newton, who are apt to know, what is going on.

The result was made manifest however when the five Ward 3 delegates refused to endorse the efficient and faithful services of Mr. Barnard, and presented another name to the convention of 35, who, without a word of inquiry or of dissent, simply ritified this unwise action, and, by implication, assured the 4200 voters of Newton that Mr. Barnard was not entitled to the same kindly consideration for valuable services rendered the city as his colleague, Mrs. Davis.

Had there been time to have properly presented this act of injustice to the voters of Newton, there would have been no question of their verdict, and they would have put their emphatic stamp of disapproval on the deed of a mere handful of selfish partisans, who happened to be invested with unrepresentative power, and were thus enabled through the party caucus to commit the people of Newton to an ungenerous act, simply to further what, in the absence of any word of explanation, will strike any impartial observer as a personal feeling against a valuable member of the Schoel Board.

Furthermore, are these few men with such personal feelings competent to voice the sentiment of 4200 citizens? Possibly the Ward 3 delegates will be only too glad to correct this impression by giving the reasons for their action, but whether th

THE December Arena celebrated the opening of its third volume by appearing in a handsome new cover of pearl grey background, printed in deep blue and silver. The effect is in good taste and highly artistic.

The table of content's is strong, thought-provoking and entertaining. The front-ispiece is a remarkably fine portrait of Count Tolstoi, made from a photograph taken from a life size painting of the count. It is a striking picture, and will be greatly prized by admirers of the great Russian author. The opening paper is on "The Christian Doctrine of Nonresistance," and embodies the views of Count Tolstoi and Rev. Adin Ballou, as set forth in an extensive correspondence carried on during this year by these two great modern apostles of the doctrine of non-resistance. Rev. Minot J. Savage contributes a delightful paper entitled "Then and Now," N. S. Shaler appears in a strong paper on "The Nature of the Negro." There is a broad-spirited and able paper by Rev. Lyman Abbot on "What is Christianity?" a full-page portrait of Dr. Abbott accompanying it. A. C. Wheeler, better known in the dramatic world as Nym Crinkle, writes in a billiant critical paper of the late Dion Boucicault. Helen H. Gardner appears in a contribution entitled "Thrown in with the City's Dead." The further contents are furnished by other writers of high ability and experience, which always characterize the Arena's contributors.

Thousands of people testify to the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations had failed.

The Theatres.

The Holis Street Theatre was filled from pit to dome Monday evening by an audience very friendly to J. K. Emmet, better known to the public as Fritz Emmet, who presented for the first time to the audience at this favorite temple of amusement his new drama, entitled "Uncle Joe; or, Fritz in a Mad House,"

It is a drama in four acts, replete with funny situations and interspersed with numerous songs by the principal actor. Mr. Emmet has always been very popular with Boston audiences, and on Monday evening proved beyond a doubt his popularity in Boston for his friends and admirers turned out in force to witness his new play. The cast is the same with two exceptions as presented the piece to the public in the first place, and those exceptions are Mr. Frank Girard, an old Boston favorite, in the character of Uncle Joe Parker, and Miss Helen Sedwick as Collie Parker, and hiss Helen Sedwick as Collie Parker, and miss Helen Sedwick as Collie Parker, and miss Helen Sedwick as Collie Parker, and in their respective parts they are excellent.

Mr. Emmet is the central figure in the cast, and the remaining characters revolve around him. Not the least noticeable characters in the play are the $5000 dog Plinlimmon and Baby Spencer, the latter one of the smallest actresses ever seen on the stage in Boston, and a remarkable pretty and intelligent child, wholly devoid of any semblance of staginess. Next week, Mrs. Leslie Carter will hold the boards in that mirth provoking piece, "The Ugly Duckling."

Will and mirth provoking speech, with the same amount of vitality and mirth provoking speech, song and action. His capable company give him the best support throughout the performances, and share in the applause called out by the sayeral seenes. The rare beauty of the stage pictures of this production has been most generously commended, and the company will leave an admiring public behind them when the present engagement is concluded. The "Merry Monarch" gives way to the great spectacular production, "Superba," by the Hanlons, next Monday evening.

At the Boston Theatre "The "Soudan" is, of course, the attraction. The 100th performance of this remarkable successful play was given Wednesday evening, and every lady attending was presented with a handsome souvenir designed by Conly, the artist.

"The Soudan" should be seen by every theatregoer in and around Boston, and those who miss it will regret their carelessness.

Heads and Young Hearts" was given, and this evening and Saturday afternoon "The Magistrate" will be presented for the last times. The season of old comedies will end on Saturday evening with a performance of "The Road to Ruin," which has proven the great success of the revival term.

"Rosedale" is booked for next week at this house.

The man or woman who has not the The man or woman who has not the capacity for enjoying such an entertainment as Miss Rosina Vokes and her company gave at the Tremont Theatre Monday evening, should never visit a playhouse, as nothing but a series of disappointments is in store for such. "The Old Musician," "My Milliner's Bill" and "A Corsican Legacy" make a delightful entertainment.

Last evening Miss Vokes changed the bill at the Tremont for the last time during her engagement, offering "Awakening," a new version of a very strong emotional play, "My Milliner's Bill," and the best "skit" ever written of its kind, "A Pantomime Rehearsal." These farewell nights in a measure certainly abound in pleasant, prospects, tempering the rein pleasant prospects, tempering the regret of parting.

Stuart Robson, in Bronson Howard's superbly effective comedy, "The Henrietta," in which-he plays so marvellously well Bertie, the lamb, will be the attraction at the Tremont next week. The comedian is always welcome in Boston. This comedy is the best of American productions, and the company and setting will be also the best possible.

Books and Magazines.

Books and Magazines.

The December Century has a Christmas story by Joel Chandler Harris, and a Christmas poem by President Henry Morton, of Stevens institute. The frontispiece is a striking head, "Daphne," by George W Maynard in "The Century Series of American Pictures," and the opening paper is General Bidwell's accounts of "Life in California Before the Gold Discovery." Here is also published "Ranch and Mission Davs in Atla California." The fiction of this number includes stories by Joel Chandler Harris, Elisabeth Stuart Phelps—"Fourteen to One" (a true story); litchard Harding Davis, and Maurice Thompson—"A Pair of Old Boys"; F. Hopkinson Smith's "Colonel Carter of Cartersville" is continued; and Sister Dolorosa," a three-part story, by James Allen is begun. This is a compauion story to Mr. Allen's tragic story of "The White Cowl." These are only a few of the features of the magazine.

MRS. GLADSTONE'S KINDNESS.

HOW THE GREAT STATEMAN'S WIFE TREATED A PRETTY AMERICAN GIRL.

A pretty American girl recently called upon Mrs. Gladstone at her London home. She carried a most favorable letter of introduction as a member of a well-known American family. Her brightness and sparkle attracted the wife of the great English statesman, and for an entire afternoon and evening she lived in the Gladstone household. She confessed to Mrs. Gladstone that her visit had a purpose—that of writing an article on the home-life of her hostess for an American magazine.

"But, my dear," said Mrs. Gladstone, "your people are interested in Mr. Gladstone, they do not know me."

"That in just why I came," replied the girl, "in order that Americans may learn a little more of you."

At the tea-table, Mr. Gladstone joined with his wife in entertaining the American girl, and few were ever given a better opportunity of seeing the Gladstone lome-life.

The quiet part which Mrs. Gladstone can girl, and few were ever given a better opportunity of seeing the Gladstone home-life.

The quiet part which Mrs. Gladstone has played in the career of her famous husband is known only to a few. While thousands of articles have been written of Mr. Gladstone, none of an authoritative character have been printed of his wife. Even her portrait is seldom seen in the English shops; rarely in prints. She has always felt that public interest in her own country and across the sea was centered in her husband, and in order that his greatness might stand out more strikingly, she has each year further retired from public view. A freshness will, therefore, attach itself to the story "A Day with Mrs. Gladstone," as it will be told by her bright young visitor in The Ladies Home Journal, of Philadelphia, during the coming year. Tois article will be one of the series of "Un' known Wives of Well-known Men," which this excellent magazine will contain during 1891.

Dr. Solomon has cured a cancer on my lip of seventeen years' standing, it was cut out twice, by what they call eminent surgeons, at intervals of six years, after being cnt out each time I knew by the feeling it was still there, and it would be now if I had not been so fortunate as to have Dr. Solomon treat it, he did it without any cutting. I would urge those afflicted with cancer not delay, but to go at once and be cured permanently as I have done. My dear Doctor I thank from the bottom of my heart.

as in addition to the old time tunes, there will be many selections by our best talent.

—Father D. J. Wholey, formerly of St. Joseph's church, Boston, and recently appointed to the Catholic parish of Newtor Centre, took charge of their first service, Sunday morning, in Associates Hall. The hall was crowded with people, standing room being at a premium. After the performance of low mass Father Wholey addressed the congregation for a short time. After 13 years in the ministry, and all that in connection with his recent charge in Boston, he has been appointed to a charge of his own, here in Newton Centre. He had left some 12.000 friends, but has brought their good wishes with him to strengthen his labors here, coupled with the prayers of those there asembled. We have a great work before us in the erection of a church for the worship of God, and only by His aid can we accomplish that task. But if we have God on our side, we have no need to worry. He said, we have the prayers of my former church, and we have your prayers and my prayers, and we shall be enabled to build a church which will reflect credit on this parish. After the sermon, Father Wholey said he was at present stopping with Father Dolan at Newton until his own house on Centre street should be ready, and urged all to come to him without fear when his services were desired.

He was 77 years of age and was born in the old Hyde homestead, corner of Galer and Washington streets, his ancestor having been Jonathan Hyde, one of Newton's first settlers, who came here with his brother in 1629.

The old homestead is still standing and on very nearly the original site, and is over 200years old. It has been the residence of five generations of the Hyde family, four of whom, Mr. Hyde, his children, one grand-child, and his father, were born there, His grandfather fought at the battle of Lexington, Mr. Hyde was edneated in the Newton Schools, and among his schoolmates were President J. N. Bacon of the Newton National Bank, and Mr. Henry Fuller. For a number of years Mr. Hyde was engaged in the stationery and periodical business. THE SEWERAGE QUESTION.

CAUSES A LIVELY DISCUSSION IN THE CITY COUNCIL.

Both branches of the city council were in session Monday evening. In the board of aldermen Mayor Burr presided and a bare quorum was present, Messrs. Bond, Fenno, Coffin and Harbach.

Alderman Fenno read a petition from Henry E. Cobb, A. R. Mitchell and a large number of other citizens, asking for a hearing on the matter of sewerage assessments. He said that he had just received notice by telephone that there was another petition from resi-dents of Ward Three, to the same effect, which was being sent to the hall and would be presented later. He moved that a hearing be granted for Monday evening, Dec. 29th, at 8 p. m. Alderman Harbach amended to make the date next Monday, the 22nd.

Alderman 'Fenno' said he moved the later date, as one member of the common council was to be away next Mon day, and he desired very much to attend hearing.

Alderman Harbach said perhaps others would be away the 29th, and he saw no need of putting it off.

Alderman Fenno said he would with-

MR. F. A. DEWSON RESIGNS.

Mayor Burr read the resignation of Mr.

Francis A. Dewson, as member of the water board, who stated that he had been 8 years a member, and considered it an honor, which he had much enjoyed, especially the harmony that had always prevailed in the board, but the pressure of his private business compelled him to tender his resignation, and he asked that he be relieved at once.

Mayor Burr said that he read the communication with extreme regret, as Mr.

Mayor Burr said that he read the communication with extreme regret, as Mr. Dewson had been one of the most trustworthy, capable and upright members of the board, and his resignation was a great public loss.

Alderman Fenno amended to lay on the table till after the hearing, as he said it was discourteous to those who asked for the hearing to go ahead and cut out the work without regard to anything they might say.

Alderman Harbach said there was no reason for laying the ordinance on the table, and no discourtesy to the petitioners was intended. It was intended as a basis for the ordinance committee, and it would be a simple matter to make changes. anges. Alderman Fenno here read the petition Aderman Fenno here read the petition of Geo. S. Lovett and a number of other Ward Three tax payers, and said it seemed to him a direct slap in the face of these men to say, no matter what you have to say, we are going to put it through.

A vote was then taken on Mr. Fenno's amendment, and it stood 2 to 2, and the original motion failed by the same vote, Messrs. Bond and Harbach voting yes and Fenno and Coffin no.

There was some private discussion between Messrs, Harbach and Coffin, after which the latter moved to reconsider.

Alderman Fenno said that there was no reason for railroading the matter through in such haste. Anything that was to cost the city about two millions of dol lars was of too much importance to be rushed through, and the citizens had a right to ask for a little delay.

Alderman Harbach said Alderman Fenno has been the great objector from the beginning, and he seems to object to doing anything. He was always ready with an objection to whatever was proposed.

An ordinance would be presented to him all drawn up, only two or three hours before the meeting of the board, and when he wanted to know what he was to vote for he was charged with being an objector. He did object to such things. Here was the whole sewerage question; the sewerage committee was not called together until November, and now at the end of the year it was sought to railroad a scheme through without a chance for discussion.

Alderman Harb ich said he thought the gentleman would find that the sewer committee met in October.

Offy solicitors.

On motion of Alderman Bond, an order appropriating $200 for the expenses in the City Solicitor's department was referred to the finance committee.

Alderman Harbach presented a report from the Water Board, recommending that the petition of W. S. Appleton and others for the laying of a water main in the Oak Hill district without the usual per cent guarantee be granted, the casain to be 19.456 feet long and estimated 40e cost $29,000.

The report was accepted and an order presented for the laying of 19.436 feet of pipe on Boylston, Parker, Dedham, Dudley and Jackson streets, at an expense of $29,000. As the measure required a two-thirds vote it was laid over until more aldermen were present.

D., pastor of the Second Congregational church and appropriate Scripture selections by Rev. Wolcott Calkins, D. D., pastor of the Eliot church, preceding the opening address by Rev. E. C. Farnham of Salem, who spoke substantially as follows:

REV. MR. FARNHAM'S ADDRESS

I offer to-day only a brief tribute of affection. Perchance I may be mistaken, but I know not of any brother minister who can touch so far off a cord in the life of our dear departed and make it speak such sweet distant memories as myself. Twenty-five years ago this very month Henry Taylor, my only brother Seth Taylor Farnham, and I, on our way to the Connecticut Literary Institution, having reached Winsor Locks, found the old stage coach running between the Locks and Suffield crowded full. We three boys betook ourselves to the drivers seat, and there in the cold and dark that winter's night, we helped to keep each other warm and glad in the glow of a friendship that burned brightly at first, and that never for one instant during these twenty-five years has had its flames choked by damp or chill.

Six years ago and more our trio was broken. After a very brief struggle with the same decease that has struck this fatal blow, my brother heard the call to higher tasks and laid down his earthly work. It is almost criminal in me that I cannot put my hand upon the letter that my dear Taylor wrote me then. How gifted he was in letter-writing! and especially when sympathy or love made its appeal to his great warm heart. What if all who have been blessed by the tender touch of his poetic mind, of his vivid imagination, of his bright faith in the blessed herafter, could speak now and bear witness to the comfort and strength which have been brought them in hours of trial by this messenger of God. He was a winged spirit to carry such missives. Of a sensitive nature, he early learned how to suffer and to rejoice with his fellow-men.

When my own brother died, Taylor felt that he had lost a brother too. So our hearts were cemented closer than ever. You will credit now what I have to say. As a school boy, in all the wide range of jubilant young life, from wrestling matches to prayermeetings and the leading of comrades to Christ, in the struggle for prizes, in successes and defeats, in the sterner battles of college days, in the

That the noble vocation of the gospel That the noble vocation of the gospel minister was the goal in view I do not doubt. For from the first days of our school life together, I do not remember that any one ever had any other prophesy for Taylor than that he was to be a preacher of the gospel. At once he was known in the school as a live Christian. He could speak and sing and study for Christ. He could romp and play and down many a bigger boy without any injury to his own or the other's Christian spitit. There was not a particle of cant in him. He hated its othorougly, that he would sooner be accused of irreverence than of unreal piety. In those early he would sooner be accused of irreverence than of unreal piety. In those early school days Taylor was a boon compan-ion of James Hope Arthur, that live coal of holy zeal for Christ that burned out all too quickly in our mission for Japan. Arthur was several years the senior of Taylor, and I am sure he loved him as a younger brother. It is more than likely that Taylor's spirit was warmed to a price on Boyston, Parker, Dednam, Dulley and Jackson streets, at an expense of 23-000. As the measure required a two-thirds vote it was laid over until more aldermen were present.

been a decade and a half of sweet home bliss too sacred to be mentioned here, and is the strain and stress and toil of all your earthly work finished. So God wills it. And for us, another mystery is added to the many that we cannot solve. Church and home and loved ones claimed thee, but thou didst hear a higher voice calling to a higher service and we could not keep thee. Good bye, husband, father, pastor, brother, friend. What your own houest heart said of your dear brother Burns only a year ago shall now be said of you. Upon many, lives have you stamped the truth of it and it is fitting to be repeated. The world is richer for his life, and heaven too; and though here upon the earth the tear-stained faces of loving friends are bowed in loneliness and grief at his departure, up in heaven the bells of welcome peal joyfully and long." Such was David Henry Taylor.

the life work of the deceased. He said:

REV. DR. HOWE'S ADDRESS.

I esteem it a great privilege to take part in these sad memorial services to-day and to express in some measure the sorrow so universal in the city of our friend's recent pastorate. It seems needless to say to those who knew the man whose manly, useful life has gone out so soon—too soon for us—that Norwich grieves with Newtonville. If sorrow makes us one, then these cities are near of touch to-day. To a great multitude representing all classes and all churches, this dark providence has come with a sense of personal bereavement.

This will not seem strange to you for a life so true, so manly, so genuine, so consecrated comes into any community with the same impression. There is a common welcome to such a life and all hearts give it a like interpretation, so that through your own love and admiration, you can infer the love and admiration, which went forth to bim in other communities where he has lived. He came to us as pastor of a large and influential church four years ago. I think he was a stranger wholly to the community and the church. It was but a little while, however, before we were made aware that a man of fine spirit, a man of rare transparency of character, with the ring of rare genunineness had come among us, a man with whom we in other pulpits could enter into fellowship. Every pastor hailed him as a comrade and a brother without stopping to as much as ask a question concerning his ecclesiastical affiliations. The qualities of character which commands the fellowship of his brethren of the clergy endeared him to the community. His warm sympathy with men, his Catholic spirit, his freedom from narrowness, his unconventional and unprofessional!bearing, his outright sincerity, his courage in the advocacy of truth and his faithfulness to duty, won him the high regard and the respect of those who did not have the opportanty of knowing him in the relation of pastor and people. They were interested in him, attracted to him by his genuineness an years. His grasp and mastery of the situation was apparent from the beginning. The church was united and enthusiastic in his lead. Congregations that filled the church gathered to his ministry. A constant, steady growth was maintained from the beginning to the close of his pastorate. The work of the church was thoroughly organized and brought to the highest efficiency. The building seemed the only restraint upon the growth of the church and a movement was set on foot for a new structure. The quality of his work in the ministry was as remarkable as the quantity. Its spiritual impression, I believe to have been of inestimable value. The estimate in which his work was held is attested by the following resolution unanimously voted at the weekly meeting of the Central Baptist church of which he was the former pastor:

"Whereas, we have learned with deep and sincere sorrow of the sudden and unexpected death of our late pastor and brother, the Rev. D. H. Taylor; and Whereas, we cherish in our hearts tender and loving memories of him as our beloved leader and associate in Christain endeavor, and
Whereas, the work for the Master which he performed as pastor of this church in the conversion of souls and the upbuilding of Christian character will abide when all earthly things shall have passed away theeefore be it

Resolved, That while we bow in meek submission to the Divine will in calling from the activities of this world our late brother, we mourn with his afflied wife and children and weep with those who are so suddenly deprived of their pastor. Resolved, That we tender to his family the sympathy and condolence of this church, with the assurance of our affectionate regard for his memory and work among us.

Resolved, That this preamble and these resolutions be entered at length more than the servers and the pastor and the pasto fruit is still maturing from the seed then sown.

Resolved, That while we mourn we yet submissively bow before this seemingly dark providence, that a life so full of usefulness should be cut off while in the very midst of his labors.

Resolved, That we extend to the deeply bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this their dark and trying hour, trusting that God will sustain them in the midst of their grief and cause that even this great trial will work out for them the peaceable fruits of righteousness, and that he who has smitten may heal.

Resolved, That we will send a copy of these resolutions to the afflicted family and enter them upon the records of our church.

The floral tributes were very beautiful, and enter them upon the records of our church.

The floral tributes were very beautiful, and included a wreath and broken sickle from the Central Congregational Sunday school; open book, inseribed "From Glory to Glory," from the Central Congregational church; floral crescent, from Mrs. D. H. Taylor's Sunday school class; wreath of roses, from Newtonville Universalist church; beautiful assortment of cut flowers from the Newton Christian Endeavor Union; bunch of Easter lilies, from the W. C. T. U. of Jamaica Plain, and a floral star, wreath and other designs, from relatives and friends.

The remains were conveyed to the friends.

The remains were conveved to the Newton cemetery and placed in the receiving tomb. The pallbearers were Deacons W. F. Slocum, E. E. Stiles and E. W. Green, Messrs. C. E. Roberts, A. J. Cumming and A. W. Cole.

During the funeral services the stores and business places were closed as a mark of respect to the deceased.

NEWTON TARIFF REFORM CLUB.

Every person interested in the subject of the Tariff, is cordi illy invited to take part in the discussions carried on in this column, Respectful consideration will be given to inquiries, criticisms, and communications of every kind, whether coming from Tariff Reformers, Free Traders or High Protectionists, Address Secretary of the Tariff Reform Club, Newton Centre, Mass.

The Farmers Alliance.

The Farmers* Alliance.

The Farmers' Alliance recently in session at Ocala, Fla., adopted one plank which is sensible, to say the least. It is that one which declares that no more money should be raised by taxation than is necessary to meet the requirements of the government, honestly and economically administered, and that the single purpose of taxation should be the raising of such a revenue. That is also what the people said in the late election, but the high protectionists in Congress do not seem to have appreciated the full force of the people's most emphatic declaration, and scoff at the suggestion that it would be wise to heed it.

He Goes With the Party.

Ex-Postmaster General Clarkson says that he thinks the Tariff should not have been raised in certain parts, but it has been made a part of the party policy, have been raised it could have been made a part of the party policy, and the true thing for Republicans to do now is to go on and show the benefits of an increased tariff. Has it become any more beneficial by party adoption? Will it please the people any better because the party sticks to it?

Jay Gould has a long head. He sees that the Republican party made a mistake when it increased the Tariff wall. J. G. is not much of a politician, but he has an eye to business.

"Rising Sun" Morse and the Tariff. Mr. Horace P. Tobey makes the following points about Congressman Morse and the new Tariff in a letter to the Boston Herald:

That, in securing the passage of the McKinley bill, Mr. Elijah A. Morse, manufacturer, made a very excellent trade for himself.

manufacturer, made a very excellent trade for himself.

That plumbago is a product of American mines, and is largely used in the manufacture of stove polish. He states himself that plumbago is produced in this country and that he uses ten tons per day, nearly all of it imported.

That, in voting for the McKinley bill, he voted to put carbon in the form of plumbago upon the free list, while he voted to put carbon in the form of coal under a prohibitory duty.

That he thus voted, also, to put a duty of 25 per cent. upon "blacking of all kinds," which includes stove polish.

That he thus voted, also, to double the duty upon tin plate, of which his competitors make boxes for packing rival stove polish.

That he thus voted, also, to increase by 50 per cent. the duty upon the bottles in which his competitors pack rival stove polish.

That he thus voted, also, not to increase by 50 per cent. the duty upon the bottles in which his competitors pack rival stove polish.

That he thus voted, also, not to increase polish.

That he thus voted, also, not to increase the duty upon the paper in which he packs his own stove polish.

That he advertises in the newspapers, as a recommendation for his own stove polish, that "the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase."

That, therefore, in thus voting he voted to secure to himself free raw materials and protected product, and to increase the manufacturing costs of his competitors.

the manufacturing costs of his compen-tors.

That free plumbago and protected stove polish meet his ideas of propriety. Free iron ore and dutiable shovels are not to be thought of.

That, when Mr. Morse legislates for his own interests, he can see the com-patibility of free raw materials and pro-tected goods; when his constituents petitioned for free iron ore he denounced the request as a "croak for free raw materials," rang in the free trade alarm bell, and asserted the incompatibility of free raw material and protected manu-facture.

In further illustration of the point, I quote from Mr. Morse's article in the Herald of Oct. 20, 1890;

If we are o have free coal and free iron and free wool, we must have free cordage, free carpet tacks, free boots and shoes. Neither Mr. McFarlin nor any one else can ride two horses going in op. osite direct ons at the same time, one called protection, and the other free trade.

Finally, that it is not, therefore, alto-gether surprising that we see him striv-ing to rally his disheartened forces, and proclaiming: "I have not modified my opinion on the McKinley bill in the slightest."

How the McKinley Bill was Passed.

Not only is the McKinley bill a new departure in American politics; in no wise justified by any existing conditions. Its passage was procured by unpre-cedented means. Never before have such enormous sums been contributed to carry an election. Never before has bribery been so unblushing.

And not only was the campaign unpre-cedented in American politics. The methods adopted to pass the bill were cedented in American politics. The methods adopted to pass the bill were equally novel. Rules were made in the House which cut off debate there, and reversed the rule, hitherto held sacred, and advocated by Garfield, Blaine and Reed himself, that the minority could insist that a majority of the whole number elected should pass a bill. This rule had commended itself to the people of many of the States. They had embodied it in their Constitutions. But Reed and his subservient followers trampled it under foot. The power thus acquired, they used to unseat Democrats legally elected; and thus obtained a more manageable majority. In the Senate the majority were equally unscrupulous. They seated the two Republican contestants from Montana, although the votes as cast, the judgment of the Supreme Court of the Territory, and the certificate of the Governor of the State were all in favor of the Democratic Senators. And with the majorities thus acquired new States were admitted, although their population was not enough to entitle them to a single seat in the House of Representatives. The McKinley bill was really passed by the votes of eight senators who represented less than one-fifth the population of the State of New York.

Prosperity Under Low Tariffs.

In spite of all the reasons which led Hamilton to recommend the first tariff which was adopted by Congress, his views differed essentially from those of our present tariff man in the sense in which those words are now used. The rates of duty which he proposed were moderate, and would now be called by the advocates of a high tariff, absurdly low. The average rate of duty under the tariff of 1883 was about forty-seven per cent. The state under the first sixty per cent. The rate under the first strip ere cent. The rate under the first strip was seven and a half per cent, on most articles that were taxable. Wood, lead and copper were on the free list, and the rate on non enumerated articles was only five per cent. The tariffs which existed in this country from 1783 to 1860, established rates of duty which would now be looked upon as extremely moderate. To this statement there are but to wo exceptions. High tariffs were in force from 1824 to 1833, and again from 1842 to 1840, thirteen years out of seventy-one. Under the operation of the tariffs, manufacturers prospered and the farmers did not suffer. During this period it was true as Hamilton said: "Nothing can afford so advantageous an employment of this extensive wilderness into cultivated farms." It is noticeable that both of the high tariffs to which I have refer a made respecting the results of their repeal were not verified by experience. On the contrary the country was never so prosperous as from 1846 to 1857. In the latter year we were confronted with the problem of a surplus and Congress the contrary the country was never so prosperous as from 1846 to 1857. "These amazing results, whilst measurably affected by the wealth of our soil, its successful tillage and abundant harvests, are yet directly traceable to the science, artisan skill, industry and energy of the American people in the great department of manufactures."

SEWERAGE ASSESSMENTS

A hearing is to be given next Monday evening on the question of sewerage assesments and other matters which the citizens do not understand, and there is evidently a good deal of opposition among the large tax payers to rushing any matter involving such large expenditures through the City Council without fuller discussion of all the provisions.

The tax payers have a right to know what is being done, and just here the sewerage committee made their mistake. No one doubts that they have studied up the matter thouroughly, have made full investigations as to the best methods of laying assessments, and arranging for the work, but they should take the people a little more into their confidence. The people like to know the whys and where-fores, not because they doubt the ability or the honesty of the committee, but as they will have to foot the bills they do not like to be absolutely shut out from explanations.

The trouble arises probably from the fact that Alderman Harbach, the chairman of the committee, is not a talker, but acts on the principle that the fewest words possible is the best policy. Con-sequently, the other members and the citizens generally have their breath com-pletely taken away when he suddenly and without warning plumps down before the board a fully developed plan, and asks to have it pushed through at once, without discussion, and as his own mind is fully made up, he does not see why any one else should need any expla-nations, or not be fully prepared to vote upon the question at a moment's notice Alderman Fenno, on the other hand, is conservative enough to desire to under-stand a question before voting, and does not believe in rushing things through without opportunity for discussion and explanation, so that the people may anderstand what is being done.

The whole sewerage business illustrates the two ways of doing a thing. A committee was appointed by the Hospital Trustees to look after the sewerage question. They went to see the Metroquestion. They went to see the actropolitan Commissioners, did their work, and let the people know through the newspapers, what had been accomplished and what was going on, and therefore received credit for great service to the city. A committee from the city government had also been at work but they had kent all knowledge of their but they had kept all knowledge of their doings from the papers, and yet when the report of the work of the Hospital committee was made public, they as sumed they had been slighted intentionally, and not been given any credit because of some ill feeling somewhere. The newspapers can't keep detectives to dog the footsteps of the city fathers nor corkscrews to open unwilling mouths, and the moral of it is that if they want people to know what they have done, they should descend a little, and use the preper channels for communicating with

To keep absolute silence on a question of so much importance as that of sewer. ing the whole city of Newton, any then to plump down their report the last month in year and ask that it be bassed atonce, as though it was an order appropriating $50 for a water main, without explanations, or arguments to show that the very best possible of all ways had been found, is asking altogether too much of any city government, and it is fortugrate that even one alderman had the courage to get up and protest. The plan proposed very possibly is the best that ild be adopted, but it is the duty of the Sewerage committee to convince the people that it is so, and not act as if any questions or demands for explanations were a personal affront. The citizens don't want to be involved in an expdudi fure of over a million dollars without Ecnowing something of what is to be done. If any explanation had been given, or the other members or the citizens had been prepared for what was to come, there would have been no objection to pushing the whole business through now even if it is just at the close of the year. The city council was intended to be a deliberative body, it should be remember ed, and so far there has been no deliberation id either branch upon the sewerage plans and if the members have any knowl-edge of the City Engineer's plans they did not obtain that knowledge at any of the public sessions of the City Coalthough probably they have all the report and could pass a civil service examination upon all the details!

STREET RAILWAY MATTERS.

The question of getting some revenue out of the use of streets by street rail-way companies seems to be favored in other cities as well as Newton. Some

THE NEWTON GRAPHIC time ago Alderman Johnson introduced an order into the board of aldermen, authorizing the mayor to petition the legislature for such power, and since other cities have taken it up and the mayor of Boston has sent out communications to other cities, asking that they cooperate with Boston in an effort to obtain the passage of an act by the legislature, authorizing cities and towns to require returns for the use of streets by private cooparations.

The Waltham city government were recently asked by the Newton street railway company for leave to extend their tracks through certain streets and on Monday night the Waltham aldermen made both a miniority and majority re-port, but finally the whole matter was referred to the next city government, with the understanding that the next legislature will be asked to take some action, and nothing will be done until the result of the petition to the legisla ture is known.

In many other cities the street railways pay something for the use of the streets, and there seems to be no reason why the street railways should not pay something for a right of way, just as steam railroads have to do. In Boston, for instance, the West End Company is making an enormous income out of its use of the public streets, which its cars monopolize in some sections to the great inconvenience of those for whom the streets were laid out, and the city gets nothing in return. Mr. Bellamy would probably recommend that Boston should make the West End Company a municipal concern, and get the benefit from the large revenue, but it is too early for such proceedings. Nevertheless, for such proceedings. Nevertheless, Boston is very much in need of money, which has now to be borrowed, and if it had only sold the franchise for its street railways, it could now be enjoying a large and much needed income from this source. Street railways are a necessity, but they are at the same time a nui-sance, and for that reason a city ought to get some revenue from them, instead of having all the profits go into the pockets of a private corporation, thus putting it in a position to own legislature and have laws made for its privrte benifit, ANOTHER SUPERINTENDENT.

The school board has finally made choice of a superintendent, and the subcommittee, Messrs. Drew, Lawrence, Putney, Mrs. Davis and Mr. Harwood, reported unanimously this week in favor of Mr. Joseph C. Jones of New York, who is very highly recommended. He is 48 years of age, was graduated at Michigan University, and has served as super-intendent of schools at East Saginaw, Mich. It is quite a coincidence that he succeeded Mr. Emerson at Harper Brothton. The committee have voted to raise his salary to $3,500, as he was getting $5,000 from the Harper Brothers. Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer was one of who recommended him most ly, she having had charge of a school in East Saginaw, while Mr. Jones was superintendent, and was much im-pressed with his excellence as an educa-

It is in the nature of an experiment to general practice is quite the other way, but the west is progressive and may be able to teach New England valuable les-sons in regard to educational systems, and it can be said that the Michigan school system stands as high as that of any state outside of New England. Mr. Jones will come without prejudices in favor of any established customs, and should be received without prejudice, and judged of by his merits. Any popu-lar prejudice against the majority of the sub-committee should not extend to him, and it is said that Mr. A. L. Harwood, who was one of the committee and knows by practical experience what the schools of Newton need, was in favor of calling Mr. Jones. Mr. J. E. Hollis, chairman of the school board, has also met Mr. Jones, and was impressed very favorably by his personal appearance and by his record as an educator. Mr. Jones is said to be a gentleman of highesticharacter, and one who commands the respect and confidence of educators generally. The position he is to hold is a very important one for the parents and pupils of Newton, and those who know the most about him feel the greatest confidence that he will prove an admirable

SCHOOL BOARD PROCEEDINGS.

SEPH C. JONES OF NEW YORK ELECTEI SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

The school board held a special meet ing in the high school building, Wednesday evening.

The most important business transactions of the state of ted was that of the election of a superintendant of schools to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Thomas Emerson.

Mr. Lawrence reported for the committee recommending for the position Mr. Joseph C. Jones of New York, and that gentleman was unanimously elected and his salary fixed at $3,500 per annum.
Mr. Jones is a graduate of the Michigan University at Ann Arbor. For 7 years he was superintendent of schools at Saginaw, Mich. He has been the head of the educational publication department of Harper Brother's New York House for the past few years. He was strongly recommended for the position by Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, the for-mer principal of Wallaslay Co. mer principal of Wellesley College, who had charge of the Saginaw training school during Mr. Jone's term of service as superintendent of schools in that city.

school during Mr. Jone's term of service as superintendent of schools in that city. In response to a petition presented by Rev. Mr. Hornbrooke, signed by over 400 pupils of the high school it was voted to fix the Christmas vacation commencing Wednesday noon, before Christmas, and extending to Jan. 5th. A communication from Maj. Benyon asking for an appropriation of $70 te buy 20 light guns for the use of boys in the high school battalion was received. The appropriation was refused.

The rule governing the number taking part in the high school graduating exercises was amended so that the number of students participating must have an average rank of not less than 75 per cent. On motion of Mr. Barnard $12,258 was appropriated for department expenses of December. The sum of $15,000 was transferred from the general to the incidental account.

The committee on salaries recommended that the salary of the masters of the Bigelow, Mason and Peirce schools be fixed at $2,000 per annum after Jan. I. Some of the members of the board thought that the salaries of all the masters should be appointed in case where excessive demands were made upon the head master's time.

President Hyde and Dr. Baker objected to an increase in the case of three masters only because they believed that such action ignored the long continued and faithful services of masters in some of the other schools. Mr. Hollis stated that the head masters of the Bigelow, Mason and Peirce schools had a larger number of rooms and scholars to look after and that heavier demands, therefore, were made upon their time. The committee on salaries, after looking into the matter very carefully, recommended after and that heavier demands, therefore, were made upon their time. The committee on salaries, after looking into the matter very carefully, recommended the increase in the case of three masters, believed to be justly entitled to the raise on account of the extra labour performed in the care of their schools.

After considerable discussion, it was voted to fix the salaries of the masters of the Bigelow, Peirce and Mason schools at $2000 per annum.

The board adjourned at 9.05 o'clock.

NEWTON CONGREGATIONAL CLUB.

OBSERVE FOREFATHERS DAY WITH AD DRESSES BY REV. A. H. PLUMB AND MR. C. W. HILL OF BOSTON.

The monthly gathering of the Newton Congregational Club Monday evening was a very interesting occasion to those present. The social hour was followed by an excellent supper, after which President Slocum called to order, and prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Cutler of Au-burndale. A select quartet, under the direction of Mr. E. P. Marsh rendered Mrs. Hemans' beautiful hymn, "The breaking waves dashed high, on a stern and rock-bound coast," with other selections during the evening. A committee was chosen to nominate a list of officers, except president, for the coming year The outlook committee through Thomas Weston, Esq., referred briefly to the great loss sustained by the church at Newton-ville in the death of its pastor, and it was voted that the executive committee prepare suitable exercises in memory of the late Rev. D. H. Taylor, in their judgment, and report at the next meeting

President Slocum briefly spoke of the topic of the evening. We meet in this our home circle in the spirit of true loyalty, to honor our forefathers. We very engaging social qualities, of the feel that whatever we have of devotion teet that whatever we have or devotion to the common weal as citizens or to the church as christians, we owe to the principles which our forefathers espoused. He spoke of the begining of constitutional liberty, and of the New England town meeting; of some vital differences in the character of these stitlers at Plymouth and at Jamestown. These characteristics have ever since been the most about him feel the greatest confidence that he will prove an admirable official.

It is said that the school board will not make the mistake of combining the offices of superintendent and secretary, and when the new superintendent comes the latter office will probably be given to Mrs. Sherwood, who has a thorough familiarity with all the details and is well fitted to discharge the duties. Mr. A. L. Harwood has filled the position temporarily, but it is doubtful if he would take it permanently, although there is no question about the very satisfactory manner in which he has discharged the duties-of the office.

Some years ago a spasm of economy passed over the city and the sole result was the reduction of the salaries of the masters of the Bigelow, Mason and Pierce schools, by $100 each. It was thought at the time that an injustice was thought at the meeting of the school board Wednesday night.

THE SEKATE Thursday passed the bill to pay the interest cue he old Newton-ville National Bank for which the late Willard Marcy worked so many years.

"Out, Brief Candle."

A picture in another column illustrates the effect at Hollings' illustrated advertisements it is very amusing. The moral is, buy a Hollings' patent of God, he sa'd it at although many say these things have come to stay, "Yet," he said." "they will stay awite word of God, he sa'd it at although many say these things have come to stay, "Yet," he said." "they will stay awite word of God, he sa'd it at although many say these things have come to stay, "Yet," he said." but awhile only, because God is in the nforal law, and in the end will manifest himself." We should never confound human and divine authority in the state, himself." We should never confound human and divine authority in the state, but keep them separate.

God is in the state, but for what purpose? To use the state as an instrument to promote civilization and freedom. The church and state are both of divine authority, one for seenlar and the other for spiritual purposes; one for time, the other for eternity. The state should promote the interests of civilization and freedom, but never seek to promote religion as an end, but only as a means. Government depends upon morality; it must have morality or the state dies. It has a right to take care of itself and therefore to teach the fundamental principles of religion, that is, to do anything necessary for its own life. This is not teaching religion.

God is thus shown in the moral law, in the state, but greatest and best of all, in redemption God is in Cl rist reconciling the world unto himself. He quoted from Mr. Gladstone as to the responsiveness of the religious life to religions truth. The address was a strong presentation of the principle which underly good government, and upon which our forefathers worked when they founded this government so strong in the spirit of true liberty and freedom.

Is Your House Comfortable?

Is Your House Comfortable?

This is to be an unusually cold winter and every one is asking this question, but not all can give a satisfactory answer. There are always some rooms which cannot be heated by a furnace, no matter how much coal is burned. To all who find this trouble, there is au easy way of remedying the difficulty, which is to have Trask & Co's hot water system applied to your furnace. This can be done in a few hours, and at a small expense, and the company guarantee to heat any room they undertake. With this system no more coal is used, and yet you can easily keep every room comfort table in the coldest weather. It can be applied to any furnace without trouble or upsetting the whole house, and the saving in coal would pay for this expense. There is nothing like a warm house, and you can easily have one by this system, which is explained in an adv. in another column.

MISS JANE AND MISS POLLY.

A CHARACTERISTIC STORY OF NEW ENG-

"Don't forget to fasten the shed door, Polly, and bring in an apronfull of cobs when you come," said Miss Jane,—and she shivered as she drew her checked shawl closer about her shoulders and closed the kitchen door. "I believe the neuralgia has got into my bones," she continued, "I must heat my feet before I do another stroke." But she kept one eye on the oven, and the other on a saucepan of boiling rice, as though time were precious, and she must keep several things going at once lest she should lose any of it.

This was a busy week in the community, for it brought Thanksgiving day, the festival of the whole year to all New the festival of the whole year to all New England people. Springvale is part o the town of Hillsboro, and at the time of which I write was a typical New England village. A quiet Rip Van Winkle sleep had settled down upor it, like a September haze, that is so beautiful that one wishes it might last forever. But Springvale was aroused at Thanksgiving time. The spirit of love and thankfulf tors two hundred years before, came down with renewed life each year upon

The expressman, with his new red wheeled wagon, held his horses head high, and with a tight rein, and every time he came over from the Centre bring. ing passengers, he entered the village with a flourish of his whip, and old Tiger (a singularly inappropriate name) was made to go over the ground with good speed. For no one knew better than did Isaac that each passenger he secured was worth at least half a dollar to him,—the those same half-dollars, stowing them away in a very grimy-looking bag, which he carefully crowded down into his he carefully crowded down into his trousers' pockets.

I have always felt that the entry of visitors into a country village is something to be thoroughly enjoyed by all concerned. If there happen to be several from one train it is an event! And the village expressman rises to the occasion and makes it a sort of triumphant procession with one Chariot. When Isaac drove over makes it a sort of triumplant procession with one Chariot. When Isaac drove over from the Centre he always let it be known whether it were worth while for the people to run to their windows and look out. Miss Jane and Miss Polly, who lived just on the turn of the road, at the foot of the hill, were kept in what they considered a whirl of excitement. They were "knee-deep," as Miss Jane said, in their Thanksgiving day preparations. But they could not refrain from darting back and forth to the kitchen window whenever they heard the red window whenever they heard the red window whenever they heard the red wheels of the express wagon come along. This same wagon had been the subject of much discussion between the sisters. Miss Jane considered it a great piece of foolishness on the part of Isaac to go to such expense in the fall of the year. "It does seem to me," she said, "that any mortal man with a grain of common sense would know better than to start out and buy a bran new express wagon in November. Why upon earth didn't he buy it before the ground froze up solid?"

"La, sister," answered Miss Polly, ""La, sister," answered Miss Polly,

The two sisters looked very much alike. Each wore her faded yellow hair put back with little side combs over the ears, it was then all twisted into a little bunch behind. It wasn't called a "Psyche knot," in those days. They usually wore caps with short strings, that fluttered as they moved briskly about the kitchen in the morning. The afternoon caps were more dressy, with an occasional bow of white ribbon put in amongst the lace of the frill. The plain dark gray or black gown, with its one straight skirt, was delightful in its simplicity and when livened up with a fresh white apron the sisters felt that they were dressed enough for any occasion.

But these two had not been the only busy ones in the village. There had been a constant lurry in every family and much running back and forth among the neighbors. In every house the larder was full, and the good old New Eugland kitchen and storeroom were filled with the odor of spiced cake and mince pies and the fragrance of quince preserve and apple-ginger. The delicately browned loaves of bread and rows of pies and puddings would have been marvelous to see in any other courtry, but here it was all a matter of course. It was the same every year, always had been, and I hope it always will be.

It was Wednesday evening, and though it was snowing a little, at twilight the lights shone cheerfully from every window as one looked up and down the village street. There seemed to be a family party in every house and the sound of merry-making floated out into the still night air, as some child opened the front door to catch a glimpse of the first falling snow. Miss Jane and Miss Polly had put on their second best black gowns and smooth shiny black silk aprons, and were now sitting before the open fire. Miss Jane had carefully turned the bottom of her skirt up over her knees. Miss Polly did not turn her gown from the heat of the fire, but seemed to enjoy getting as close as she could te the hot coals, upon which she occasionally threw a chip and watched the bright blaze go danc the turkey," said Polly, "but I don't feel quite sure about the mince pies."

"Yes" replied Miss Jane, thoughtfully;
"I remember we were a little in doubt about that last bit of cinnamon. I hope in all mercy we did not get in five instead of four teaspoonfuls. If there is any spice on the face of the earth that tastes cheap it is cinnamon. You are sure, Polly, that you sifted sugar over the tops before putting on the upper crusts? It makes agreat difference in the goodness of the pies. I declare! Polly! I am almost sorry I did not let you sprinkle on a few drops of brandy. But then that little bottle is all we have left, and between you and me, it is all we have lad for years, and I feel that it must be saved for sickness.

"Don't talk about sickness, Jane, tonight of all times; it's apt to bring disaster," said Polly; "and that reminds me that I forgot to set away the Marlborough puddings."

"Of all things, Polly Morlier, have you forgotton those pies! Dear me! I consider them the choicest viands we have made."

And Miss-Jane went scrambling after Miss Polly, who had already reached the forgotton those pies! Dear me! I consider them the choicest viands we have made."

And Miss Jane went scrambling after Miss Polly, who had already reached the kitchen, and was darting into the pantry, carrying a pie in one hand, and a flaring candle held high in the other. Miss Jane took the candle and set it down on the broad shelf with a thump. The two sisters then carefully carried the Marlborough pies to the corner cupboard, which place they had always looked upon as set apart for their most aristocratic viands, since it had once held a jar of preserved ginger which old Capt. Carew had brought them when he made his "last vyage to the Indies."

They certainly were most delicious looking pies. A golden yellow apple custard, beneath a soft rich ilm of cream browned to a turn. So rich, and yet so light, so delicate and yet so filling!

It certainly was worth a fortune to be such wonderful cooks.

The sisters then returned to their respective corners by the fireside, and took out their knitting from the silk bags which hung on either side of the fire frame. "Kint two, seam two," said Miss Polly, mechanically, as she clicked her needles back and forth. And the fire burned brighter and the faces of the two sisters shone cheerfully, as each rounded the heel and prepared to knit across the instep.

"I don't ever enjoy this part of the stocking, sister," said Polly, "it is fussy to knit, and—" here a great rattling of wheels, and shouting of voices were heard.

The sisters rushed to the door, Miss Jane thoughtfully nutting the cardle in "The camphor, Polly," said Jane, with coolness, and as it it were no uncommon thing for her to see a man fall at her feet; and she proceeded to rub his face with it till he gasped. "And now the brandy, Polly," and she managed to pour a few drops down his throat. Meanwhile, Isaac, after his one ejaculation of "Crotch all nemlocks!" stood as if rooted to the spot.

Although Miss Jane was only a quiet little woman who spent her time in doing plain sewing and making button-holes, she was a person quick to think and of cool judgment. She now began to give directions like a general, and in a short time the strange gentleman had been carried into the house, the doctor had bandaged his sprained and bruised ankle, everybody else had gone home, and the natient was asleep. Miss Jane and Miss Polly sat before the bed of glowing hickory coals.

Each had slipped on her doublegown and drawn on her gray worsted shoes; and they had taken out the little side combs and put on their white cambric night-caps. Now they were ready to sit up and watch all night, and take turns in carriag for the sick man. Miss Jane spoke in a whisper, and the younger sister carefully crept over to the bedroom door and listened. All was still, and she as quietly returned to her chair and seated herself by the fire again. There was a weird light from the candle, which occasionally flared up in the corner of the room, where they had placed it on the floor, carefully shaded by a heavy petticoat thrown over a chair near by. The sisters looked at each other.

Finally Miss Polly spoke: "Jane, did you notice what a remarkably fine nose he had?"

"What?" said Miss Jane. "Couldn't you find something to think of beside that man's nose? A nose is a nose the world over!"

"Yes, yes, sister, but you will allow that one does not often see a very handsome one," meekly replied Miss Polly. She then straightened up in her chair and sat quietly looking at her sister, ready to listen to whatever she might say.

But Miss Jane was silent. They could hear the slow and mournf same yagos had been the soldest of the street of the stree rule. He painfully limped toward the two sisters, and politely took off his battered slik hat, and taen fainted dead away at their feet.

"The camphor, Polly," said Jane, with coolness, and as if it were no uncommon the coolness, and as if it were no uncommon the coolness and as if it were no uncommon the coolness.

open door, where he could see them and there the two little friends took turns in getting up and trotting in with each course in its turn. What mortal man, even if he be 50 and a bachelor, could but he touched by such devotion and such kindness!

And if that same man was a Frenchman and had to stay five whole weeks, shut up in the house with two such cheerful ladies as Miss Jane and Miss Polly, how could he help falling in love with one or the other?

But with which one? Ah! that was the difficulty! Miss Jane was so patient and kind and paid so little attention to his "Diable," when she bandaged his lame ankle that he felt she was certainly the most remarkable woman out of France! But then, a little later when Miss Polly came in binging such delightful coats at laways hot and crisp with a soft boiled egg done to a turn; and a small blue china cup, filled with such delicious coffee, into which she so deftly dropped the two lumps! Ah! what could be more divine!

And so he hovered on the brink of uncertainty in his own mind, until finally I must confess that Miss Polly and her great ability as chef de cuisine won the day. He offered her his hand and the devotion of his remaining years, would she but consent to share her lot with him.

Funny? Why, yes, it was odd that this little old lady of 50 should marry and be transplanted among such wholly different surroundings.

But both sisters accepted the change and adapted themselves to it, for Mousieur Bonnat had not the heart to separate such faithful friends. So one morning in spring Miss Jane turned the key in the lock, and the smoke was no longer seen to rise from the little red chimney of the small gray house under the hill. Bonnat, with his wife and sister, were speeding away to the great city which was to be their home.

Success followed them, as it should such a worthy couple. The experienced New England cooks took great pleasure in trying and showing their skill in the culinary science. Bonnat's became more and more popular. The fame of the Marlborough pudding pies was wonderful! But the recipe for this delectable viand was treasured by the Frenchman like gold, and it was passed down as a valuable inheritance from one famous cook to another.

For years the grases has been growing green over the graves of Monsieur Bon nat and "Miss Jane and Miss Polly," and some day if you will go with me to Springvale I will show you the three marble stones, now moss-grown and gray, that mark their resting-place under the slender white birch trees in the cemetery on the hill.

And if you have any doubt about the truthfulness of this little tale, when you are in New York, slip into Brittinell's some evening. You remember the place.—on Fifth avenue, just above Eighteenth street. Have your table-d'hote dinner, while the black-frocked, white-necktied gentleman who serves you hovers near. But when the time for your dessert approaches, let me advise you, if it is in November, don't let him bring you availla cream, or a pine-apple ice, with one of those marvelous celairs. But in a voice low, but firm, say to him "Waiter! (at the same time showing him a quarter) bring me a Marlborough'—and before you can say another word, be he a Pole from Hungary, or a Frenchman from e

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, ac-cumulating in the glands of the neck, pro-duces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing bilindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, can-cerous growths, or the many other manifesta-tions usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. "My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child," J. S. Carkille, Nauright, N. J. N. B. "The Kindergarten attempts a rational respectful treatment of children, leading them to do right for right's sake, abjuring all rewards save the pleasure of working for others, and the delight that follows a good action, and all punishments save those that follow as a natural penalties of broken laws—the obvious consequences of the special bit of wrong whatever it may be. The child's will is addressed in such a way as to draw it on, if right, to turn it willingly, if wrong. If the child is unruly in play, he leaves the circle and sits or stands by himself a miserable, lonely unit, until he feels again in rympathy with the community. If he destroys his work, he unites the tottering fragments as best he may, and takes the moral lesson home with him. If he has neglected his own work, he is not given the joy of working for others. If he does not work in harmony with his companions, a time is chosen when he will feel the sense of isolation that comes from not living in unity with the prevailing spirit of good will. He can have as much liberty as is consistent with the liberty of other people, but no more. If we could infuse the spirit of this kind or of the special bit of wrong whatever it may be. The child's will is addressed in such a way as to draw it on, if right, to turn it willingly, if wrong. He can have as much liberty as is consistent with the liberty of other people, but no more. If we could infuse the spirit of this kind of discipline into family and school life, making it systematic and continuous from the earliest years, there would be fewer morally "slack twisted" little creatures, growing up into inefficient, bloodless manhood and womanhood. It would be a good deal of trouble any way, if you come to that. We can't expect to swallow the universe like a pill and travel on through the world "like smiling images pushed from behind." Virtue thrives in a bracing moral atmosphere where good actions are taken rather as a matter of course. The atment to the tiny slips of humanity that find their way into the kinder-garten is most useful and "infinitely to be preferred to the most implicit blind obedience to arbitrary command.

In the former case we may hope to have, some time or other, an enlightened wil and conscience struggling after the right, failing often but rising superior to failure, because of an ever stronger joy in right and shame for wrong."

The Theatres.

Mr. Field could not have made a better choice of entertainment for the Christ-mas weeks than that now announced, Lester Wallack's "Rosedale," a superb performance to which no theatre or com pany in the entire country can furnish the parallel, and that charming dramatic pany in the entire country can lurins the parallel, and that charming dramatic version of Dickens' David Copperfield, known as "Little Em'ly." The weeks of December 13 and 22 are set apart for these two plays, the first named being performed the entire week of the 15th, and the two sharing, perhaps, the week of the 25d—'Little Em'ly' in any event being produced on Christmas, and the two days immediately following. On Monday, December 29, a very great attraction is to be offered in the first preformance in this country of a new comedy which has just completed a most successful ruin at Tool's Theatre, London, entitled "The Solicitor," and a new one-act comedy by Clyde Fitch-its first production on any stage—entitled "Betty's Finish." These two comedies promise an entertainment both charming and laughable, and quite in touch with the Boston Museum's reputation.
"Superba" is the attraction this week and next at the Globe Theatre. The new piece comes highly recommended from "The Soudan" still holds the boards at the Boston theatre. The house has been crowded at nearly every performance and there is an active demand for seats. "The Crystal Slipper" is booked for this theatre, however, and "The Soudan" will soon have to make room for it, so that those who have remained away from the feeling that there was plenty of time in which to see "The Soudan," will be disappointed if they do not apply early for seats.

Cancer Can be Cured and by Dr. James M. Solomon, Jr., 75 Court St, Boston, Mass. Boston, Aug. 26, 1890.

Boston, Aug. 26, 1890.

Dr. Solomon has cured a cancer on my lip of seventeen years' standing, it was cut out twice, by what they call eminent surgeons, at intervals of six years, after being cut out each time I knew by the feeling it was still there, and it would be now if I had not been so fortunate as to have Dr. Solomon treat it, he did it without any cutting. I would urge those afflicted with cancer not delay, but to go at once and be cured permanently as I have done. My dear Doctor I thank from the bottom of my heart.

Windsor Castle Curiosities.

Mindsor Castle Carlos Illes.

Among the many rare curiosities with which Windsor Castle abounds is a very antique clock, which goes for a whole year when once wound up, and keeps excellent time. It is in the Zuccarelli room, which derives its name from the fact that the walls are hung with masterpieces by that artist. Another curio is the huge malachite vase in the grand reception room, which was presented to the Queen by the Emperor Nicholas of Russia, and which up to last year was the largest in England. Now, however, Lord Revelstord is the possesor of one even larger. The Windsor vase is made of a mosaic of small pieces of malachite, so carefully fitted together that it is only in a good light that the joints can be seen. The vase is appropriately placed in the great north window of the grand reception room so that the light is always behind it. There are two other big malachite vases at Windsor, the one placed in the Rubens room, and the other in the crimson drawing-room.—Commercial Advertiser.

Tuesday morning. The door of the ticket office was forced open, and the ticket case broken into. The money drawer contained about 20 cents in pennies, which were left untouched, and nothing of value was taken.
It is supposed that the safe was the principal object of the visit, and that the intruders were frightened away before getting a chance to blow it open. The station is

A business meeting of the Lyceum was held Monday at recess. The business transacted was the passing of rules governing the method of procedure at future meetings. These rules were, that the chairman of the reporting committee should have unlimited time for his first remarks and five minutes for any subsequent remarks. The members of the house are governed by the same rule with the exception that the first remarks should only occupy ten minutes. The closing arguments should be called for at 9 p. m., unless the rules were suspended. It was decided that all committee reports should be in writing, and the clerk should keep them for future reference. Cleveland nearly four years ago, succeeding to the office when it but poorly fulfilled the demands of the public. Oct 1, 1888, free delivery was established largely through Postmaster Morgan's efforts, only 18 months after his appointment.

Many important improvements have been made in the Newton Postoffice dur-ing Postmaster Morgan's administration. The office when he took charge was crowded into a small space and provided

Ing Postmaster Morgan's administration. The office when he took charge was crowded into a small space and provided with few conveniences. Following his appointment, Postmaster Morgan commenced the agitation for a first-class office. He wrote several letters to the postoffice department at Washington without result, and finally wrote to ex-Congressman Burnett, who interested himself in the matter. He came to Newton and looked over the office, pronouncing it unsuited in every way for the prompt and satisfactory transaction of business. The postoffice deportment finally leased a large store in Lancaster's block, and had it fitted up in first-class shape for postoffice purposes, putting in all necessary fixtures. The improvements cost about $2000.

The office has been so well managed during the past four years that there is no opposition to the reappointment of Postmaster Morgan, who has proved to be the right man in the right place. A petition signed by over 99 per cent. of the Republican voters of the Newton postoffice district urging the reappointment of Postmaster Morgan has been forwarded to President Harrison. The signers of the Petition include the chairman and members of the Republicans, the president and cashier of the Newton National Bank, the president and treasurer of Newton, all the editors of the Newton matter, all the prominent Republicans, the president and cashier of the Nonantum worsted mill, the editors of the Newton papers, Mayor-elect Hibbard, ex-Mayor W. P. Ellison, the city treasurer of Newton, all the local business men, clergymen, physicians and lawyers, the commander and prominent members of Charles Ward post 62, G. A. R., Senator-elect Gorham D. Gilman, Judge John C. Kennedy of the municipal court and all members of the reappointment of Postmaster Morgan, and there court and all members of the city council residing within the limits of the Newton postoffice district.

Everybody apparently in the Newton postoffice district favors the reappointment of Postmaster Morgan, and there are no candidates at present in the field against him.

Postmaster Morgan's popularity is due to his attention to details of the office, courteous treatment of the postoffice patrons, and the improvements in the service brought about largely through his efforts. The receipts of the Newton postoffice during his term of service have increased nearly 50 per cent.

Chairman Coffin of the Newton Republican ward and city committee stated vesterday to a Herald reporter that he signed Postmaster Morgan's petition for reappointment because the postoffice during his administration had been conducted with great ability and energy, and to the satisfaction of the public. "I am a believer in civil service reform," added Chairman Coffin, "and I want to see Mr. Morgan returned in the interests of the public service. I hope and feel assured that his petition will be endorsed by Congressman Candler."

The question of Postmaster Morgan's successor is undoubtedly solved. He will probably succeed himself.

National Encampment, G. A. R. The final meeting of the G. A. R.

National Encampment committee held last week, and the committee was enabled to return the guarantee fund to the subscribers, the other contributions being so generous as to leave that fund untouched. The committee then passed the following resolution, which unanimously adopted:

untouched. The committee the passes the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

The success of the 24th National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic is now a matter of history, and the memory of the grand reception to the assembled veterans from all parts of the country will live in the hearts of all who were fortunate enough to participate in the festivities of the occasion as long as life shall last.

Ir is a well-known fact that the admirably arranged system of the executive committee—whereby every detail was looked after and nothing omitted or left undone—made it possible for Boston to outdo every other city that had ever entertained the Grand Army as its guests. The culmination was brought about by our men of brains and genius, headed by men of great executive ability and energy; and we attribute to Col. Haskell the credit of being one of the most foremost in zeal, enthusiasm and that pure essence of public spirit that achieves the greatest successes in all that appertains to the credit of our city. Col. Haskell devoted unlimited time, taken from his hours for private business interests, and give it to the interests of Boston's celebration.

As a part of the result of his earnest and untring efforts, in co-operation with others, the State and city made generous appropriations, and he has the satisfaction of seeing, what is rare in the annals of the disbursement of funds for great undertakings, the return to the guarantors, as has just been done by unanimous vote, the entire amount called for on their several subscriptions. It is therefore,

Resolved, that the members of the figures committee of the National Eu-

Resolved, that the members of the finance committee of the National Eucampment of the Grand Army of the Republic do extend to Col. Edward H. Haskell, their efficient chairman, their hearty and impartial thanks for the conscientious manner in which he has discharged the onerous duties which devolved upon him and for his unflagging zeal and energy in the attainment of funds wherewith to carry on a celebration that went to make up one of the grandest events in the history of our city.

For the first time since the opening of the

The Arlingtons have not rolled such a

There is some talk of a change in the makeup of the Newton Inter-league club team. The new men, whose claims are being considered on occount of their high averages in the local club tournament, are Messrs. Carter, Hamilton, Keller and Shirley. NONANTUM —There will be a Christmas concert in the North church next Sunday evening, at 6.30 o'clock. A very interesting program has been prepared. Mr. C. A. Lummus, who has served the Sunday school nearly two years as assistant superintendent, presented his resignation last Sunday, to take effect Jan, 4. Mr. Lummus has worked efficiently in the school and will be greatly missed.

The necessity of providing a public play ground before the population grows so large as to take up the available places which can now be had, grows more apparent as the steady progress of building operations is noted in this end of our city. The Hygiene and Emergency Society strongly recommend prompt action, and it is understood that the city will bear some portion of the expense, provided the citizens do their share.

SEWERAGE ASSESSMENTS.

MONDAY NIGHT'S HEARING BEFORE THE CITY COUNCIL.

Both branches of the City Council met Monday night and all the members of both branches were present.

In the board of aldermen a petition was presented for the flooding of Pike's pond for skating, and an order passed authorizing the water board to flood it, which was amended by Alderman Bond, limiting the expenses to $5, as he said they did not wish to place all the miscel ous appropriation at the disposal of

ANOTHER POLICE SIGNAL REPORT.

The aldermen, Messrs. Hamblen, Harbach and Johnson, on the committee to investigate the workings of the Gamewell police signal system, made the following report:

weil ponce signal system, made the following report:

The committee was organized Nov. 24, and an order through his honor, the Mayor, was given to Chief Bixby to notify Capt. Ranlett that until further notice, rothing be done to any of the apparatus upon the table, in the shape of repairs, but that the batteries, boxes and wires, be kept in shape as usual. It should be understood that Capt. Ranlett has had entire charge of the system since it was introduced into the city and has made all repairs (except what changes the Gamewell have made) and has been in the Central Station, almost every day to remedy what was out of order. This he did up to the time the order was given. The order went into effect Nov. 25.

The first investigation as a committee was made in the evening of Dec. 2, man made in the evening of Dec. 2, Aldermen Hamblen and Harbach driving over the city, with Alderman Johnson in the Central station. Ten boxes were pulled in and out of that number seven failed to properly register. Boxes 61, 62 and 65 showed that some one had pulled in because the time was stamped on tape, but there was no telling what boxes they were. Box 53, a telephone was pulled in, but it did not register on the tape. Box 34 was very indistinct. Box 32 the 'elephone call could just as well have been taken for wagon call. Boxes 41 and 36 all right. Box 23 did not register telephone. Box 59 all right. It was intended to make one more trial of the system before giving orders to have Capt. Ranlett overhaul and repair, but was it working so badly that we concluded not to, and an order was given to fix up the system December 6. The excuse given for boxes refusing to register at all when pulling in, was, that a switch might be out of place being as they were on the front edge of the table, where they could be easily displaced, by any one in leaning over the table to see time on the tape. Dec. Sand 9, a party representing the Gamewell people, placed the switches on the back of the table out of the way and in other ways fixing the system in working order, and when he left on Tuesday Dec. 9, the system is book visited the station nearly if not every morning, to see that it was all right. December 18, nine days after, the committee took another trip. This time Aldermen Johnson and Harbach pulling in and Alderman Hamblen at the office. Thirteen boxes were visited and out of that number three refused to register, one refusing to register and to give return blow on box, and one refused on return blow only as follows: Box 56 did not stamp the time and did not register telephone call. Box 65 did not give return blow on pox, and one refused on return blow only, as follows: Box 56 did not stamp the time and did not register telephone call. Box 62 did not register telephone call. OAK HILL WATER MAIN.

OAK HILL WATER MAIN.

Alderman Harbach brought up the order appropriating $29,000 for laying of water mains in the Oak Hill district, but Alderman Fenno objected to the suspension of the rules for a second reading and it went over.

The free use of City Hall was granted to the class of 1890, N. H. S. for a reunion on Dec. 30, 1880.

Alderman Hamblen reported on petition of John Steams for damages on account of change of grade on Parker street, giving him levye to withdraw.

The special committee on making a change in the Read Fund committee to a regular board reported that the committee should remain as at present.

OAK HILL AGAIN.

Alderman Harbach moved to reconsider the vote on the Oak Hill mains, but the motion was lost.

The Mayor appointed Chas. A. Morse as Hoseman on No. 2. Hose to fiill a vacancy. The board then took a recess till 8 o'clock when a Alderman Harbach said this was correct.

Mr. Farquhar said that simplified the question; there were three parts of the sewerage system, the sewers, the subsol drains, and the surface drains. With this explanation the main thing is whether this $3 per foot is a right and equitable charge. He did not think any citizen questioned the main question of sewerage, but the committee had not taken the public into their confidence as much as they might have done. The charter of the city, he understood, gave the citizens a right to have a hearing on all matters and also to assume the rights delegated to their representatives. For the citizens a right to have a hearing on all matters and also to assume the rights delegated to their representatives. For this reason the citizens had a right to be kept informed of what was going on. Since they had asked for a hearing the petititioners had received a careful synopsis of the plans of the committee, but if the cost of the Metropolitan sewer was put on the whole city, why not put the cost of the three main arteries on the whole city. They would be the largest expenditure, and were built for the future, and the future would get the benefit of them. They might not be completed for ten or fifteen years, and the citizens ought not to be taxed for what would not be done for ten or fifteen years. He for one was ready to back up the committee for their arduous labors on the matter, but he also felt that the tax was an onerous one, and if he had to pay it he would like to know how much of it was for the main arteries and how much for the small sewer built for his use.

Ex-Mayor Hyde said he came from back much for the small sewer built for his use.

Ex-Mayor Hyde said he came from back in the country, on the south side of the city, where they did not expect sewers for a good many years, but he approved of the plan of the committee and felt that the north side of the city should have sewers as soon as connection could be made with the Metropolitan system. It was right and just that the cost of the sewers should be paid by the abuttors. It would take years, however, to sewer the whole city, and it would come very hard when sewers were laid through a sparsely settled district. He represented a farm which had a large frontage, and if a sewer was laid there, they might as well give the farm to the city. If 25 per cent. was laid on the city, the Oak Hill man would pay his tax for 20 years before he got any benefit of the sewerage system. He had found only one man in all he talked with who favored the minority plan.

Alderman Fenno said he had signed the minority report, but he did not advocate an immediate payment of the 25 per cent. but to put it in a long time bond, the system would cost more, as we were building it for the future, and the future should help pay for it. The whole system will cost two millions, of which $200,000 is for the Metropolitan sewers. He thought $300,000 ought to be raised by bonds, toward the cost of the trunk sewers, and let future generations pay for it. We are building large enough for 40 years, and part of them will not be built for 20 years?

Mr. E. W. Gay said he thought the assessments were as reasonable as the abuttors could expect. He represented an estate which had 2,000 fect of frontage and the cost to him would be large if sewers were built there at once, which he hoped would not be the case. If the assessment had been made to cover 150 feet in depth instead of 180 feet; it would cover the averege estate, and he thought also a board like the water board would be preferable to a joint committee of the city council with its yearly changes. use.
Ex-Mayor Hyde said he came from back would be preferable to a joint committee of the city council with its yearly changes.

Councilman Bates said the maintenance of the Metropolitan system would add 40 cents a thousand to the tax rate, and if the main arteries were included it would make 80 cents a thousand.

Dr. Otis E. Hunt said that to pay for the sewers as they are built would be a burden and the cost had better be extended over a term of years, than put all on at present. They could ease matters by putting one half on the abuttors and raise the rest by bonds. They could not make it equal any way. Take an estate on the main streets where land is valued at 50 cents a foot, and the owner has a $10,000 house, and the owner has a $10,000 house, and the would only be taxed the same as the poor man on a side street, whose land was only worth 10 cents or less a foot, and whose house was not worth more than $3,000.

IT WAS NOT EQUITABLE

to make two such estates pay exactly the same, and we should in some way make same, and we should in some way make people pay in proportion to their means. If part was assessed on the abuttors and part on the city we should be nearer an equitable adjustment of the cost. In many places the sewers would never be used by the abuttors, where they had only one faucet, and no water closet. People who needed it the most would not use it. He said there was no danger in Newton, where people had good cesspools, and he hoped some system not so onerous would be adopted.

Mr. Marcus Morton asked if any other city or town had just this systen, and Alderman Harbach said it was COPIED FROM BROOKLINE.

Mr. Morton said Brookline was a compact village with a small area, with few farms, and the land mostly held by wealthy people, but the conditions in Newton were very different. If the whole amount had to be paid tonce, many owners in Newton would have to mortgage their estates. One member from the remote districts said his section would not be served for 40 years, and the result would have been districted by the served for 40 years, and the result would have been districted by the served for 40 years, and the result would have been districted by the served for 40 years, and the result would have been districted by the served for 40 years, and the result would have been districted by the served for 40 years, and the result would have been districted by the served for 40 years, and the result would have been districted by the served for 40 years, and the served for 40 years. may owners in Newton would have to a vacancy. The board then took a recess till so clock when a JOINT CONVENTION was held for the hearing on sewerage assessments. On motion of Alderman Johnson the chairman of the sewerage committe, Alderman Harbach, was called on to explain the proposed method. He did this briefly and said that the city assumed the cost of maintenance and its proportion of the cost of the Metropolitan system. But the city sewers were to be assessed directly on the abuttors; and the average cost was found to be size of the city, and saw no reason why the cost of sewers should not be divided in the same way. The proposed system did not see to him can be also that there should be that there should be that there should be that there should be the same way. The proposed system did not see why it should not go over to another year, especially as the method was different from the one in Boston.

Mr. D. W. Farquhar said he should like to find out what the plan of the committee was, and he understood that the cost of the main of the Metropolitan system was to be assessed on the whole city. He asked what made up the cost of $\frac{1}{2}$ per foot, and if the main arteries in Newton were included?

Mr. Farquhar said he should conduct the was a did from the one in Boston.

Alderman Harbach said it would increase taxes and keep people from coming here. Secondly, it would place part of the burden on personal property and he thought the burden should fall on real estate and not on personal property.
Alderman Feuno said the state sewer would not be finished probably before the spring or summer of 1892, and there was no need of deciding at once as no assessments could be collected until connections had been made with the Metropolitan sewer.

Mayor Burr said the state commissioners had promised that the Metropolitan sewer would be ready to enter by January, 1892. Mr. Lovett said there was even then no Mr. Lovett said there was even then no hurry on this matter. It was the most important subject that had ever come be-fore the city government, and time should be taken to think it over. It might be that the best possible plan had been found, but there would be no harm in that the best possible pian had been found, but there would be no harm in talking it over.

Ex-Alderman Ward said that he had been chairman of the sewerage committee two years ago, and any one who had heard as much of the matter as he had would want it settled at once. It oungst to have been settled long ago. The method was as just as any that could be adopted. As for the cost of maintenance, it would be different from anything he ever knew of, if it did not cost more than was estimated.

Mr. J. Sturgis Potter asked what was the custom in other cities.

Alderman Harbach said most other cities assume 1-4th of the cost, but it was different in Newton, as here we had to have a separate system for drainage. Out of 66 cities 59 assess 3-4ths on the property.

Mr. J. P. Cartar said he did not see.

of 66 cities 59 assess 3-4tns on the property.

Mr. J. R. Carter said he did not see why personal property should be exempt. The whole question was one of public spirit, and we all expect to pay our part. What difference does it make whether it is assessed on real estate alone or on that and personal property? For my own part, the sewers would not benefit me, but I think we should have them for the good of the city.

Ex-Alderman Mason said if part of the main branch sewers were built by the same and the average cost of the rest

Ex-Alderman Mason said if part of the main branch sewers were built by bonds, and the average cost of the rest assessed on the abbuttors, no one would object. It did not make much difference as each would have to pay the whole cost sometime. But those who had sewers would have no further expense, while all the rest of the city would be taxed for part of the cost and yet have to pay for cleaning their cesspools.

Mr. E. P. Bond said that all agree that we must have sewerage, and that the abuttors should pay a part, if not all, but it seemed hardly fair to make the man owning land worth a cent a foot pay just owning land worth a cent a foot pay just as much as the man owning land worth 50 cents a foot. He would like to have the committee take more time and think over it.

the committee take more time and think over it.

Mr. Chas. S. Davis sympathized with Mr. Bond; Newton did not compare with Brookline; there the land is worth from 50 cents to two or three dollars a foot, and there are no farmers to speak of, so that the method might be fair there, while it would be very unequal in Newton. He owned a good deal of land which could only be used for farming purposes, and yet if sewers were laid on a street running through it he would have to pay just as much as if it was the most valuable land in the city.

Mr. Curtis Abbott thought that more time should be taken in regard to the assessments and that it would not delay construction.

time should be taken in regard to the assessments and that it would not delay construction.

Mr. Bullivant asked Alderman Harbach why not carry the matter over for a few weeks until the citizens know more about it.

Alderman Harbach said the whole thing should be carried through this year. It was not proper to appropriate money and not know how we were going to pay it. By the time all the new members next year get the subject studied up, it will be too late to do anything.

Councilman Datch said the committee had done all in its power to hasten the work and delay was dangerous. It was unfair to assess any of the cost on personal property. He owned no real estate and it would be unfair to tax him for sewerage.

Mr. Samuel Farquhar asked how the money was to be raised to do the work mext year.

Alderman Fenno said that the city would issue bonds for $350,000.

Mr. Farquhar said that as no assessments would be made until next year, why not wait till then?

Mr. Loveit said he failed to see any satisfactory reason for refusing to delay for a while, until the citizens had more information.

SEWERAGE ORDINANCE.

Alderman Bond reported the ordinance relative, to sewerage and drainage, the chairman dissenting, and it was moved that it pass to be enrolled.

Alderman Fenno asked when the committee met to consider it, to which Alderman Bond replied, last Tuesday.

Alderman Fenno said the committee met the very next day, in spite of the petitious received the night before for a hearing, and voted to put it through. If that was not railroading a measure he did not know what was.

Alderman Harbach said the committee held themselves open to conviction but they had heard nothing to influence them to make a change.

Alderman Fenno said that it was a direct slap at the petitioners, and the facts bore him out.

Alderman Fenno asked if he had done so hurriedly or had his attention been called to this especial point.

Alderman Pettee said a great change had appeared to have come over people. A few weeks ago, we were told that sewerage was the great question and could not be pushed fast enough, and everything must be sacrificed to it, and now we are told we are going too fast and must delay.

After more discussion the ordinance was passed to be enrolled, but Alderman Fenno changed his vote and gave notice that he should move to reconsider at the next meeting.

Tribune, The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, the St. Paul Pioneer Press and the Minneapolis Journal are kicking against the McKinley bill and demanding a reduction of the tariff.

How it Affects Wages.

A dispatch from Trenton, N. J., De cember 10 says:

cember 10 says:

The Manufacturing Potters' association, consisting of owners of potteries making sanitary ware in this city, Baltimore, and East Liverpool, held a meeting in this city on Tuesday and decided to reduce the wages of the operative potters from 10 to 20 per cent.

The pottery business is one of the chief beneficiaries of the tariff. The new tariff law does not increase the rates of duty, but the McKinley administrative bill accomplished indirectly an increase of from 5 to 15 per cont.

Pointed Questions.

If Protection makes high wages why are the wages of Free Trade England higher than those of Protectionist Belgium, France and Germany, and why are the wages of Russia, Austria and Italy, which have the highest tariffs in Europe, lower than any other wages in all that lower than any other wages in all that continent? Why are the wages in New South Wales (Australia) so much higher than in England, when there is practically Free Trade between the countries? Why is it fair that American copper should be sold cheaper in London than it is in America? It has been so sold for years, and it has been caused solely by the tariff. Do you think the laborer in the mines got any more pay who mined the copper for the American market than the one who mined the same copper for the London market?

Why is it fair that an American farmer should pay $125.00 to $163 00 for an American made "improved binder and reaper," when the American maker of the same sells the same identical machine to Canadians and other colonists of Great Britis for $200 to $150 00.00.

nadians and other colonists of Great Brit-ain for $95,00 to $115,00?

The Time for Low Tariff has Come.

Every one of the conditions which Hamilton in 1780 put forward as the justification for his tariff policy has ceased to exist. The country is no longer weak and poor. It has become the richest and most powerful nation in the globe. It has more miles of railroad the globe. It has more miles of railroad the globe. It has more miles of railroad than all other countries of the world put "together. Its manufactures have devel oped and become enormously productive, and many of them very profitable. They have had thirty years of a high protective tariff. Improvements in the means of transportation have kept with the growth of the country in territory and make it practically more compact and make it practically more compact and accessible than it was in 1789. Its trade with foreign countries has enormously increased. The country with which our make it practically more compact and accessible than it was in 1780. Its trade with foreign countries has enormously increased. The country with which our commerce is most extensive and most profitable, admits all the products of this country except wine, spirits and siver plate free of tax. It would seem therefore that if we are to follow the counsel of our earlier statesmen, or be guided by the reasons which led them to advise the adoption of a tariff on imports, we should into the country with the view it is. Through a possible internal revenue to the country with the view it is. Through a possible internal revenue dates have been repeated. Fractically all the internal revenue dates have been repeated except those on spirits and tobacco. But the promises imposed, that with their reduction the corresponding rates of duty that had been levied upon imports should also be reduced, have not been kept. There did both parties would be to effect reasonable reductions in the duties on imports. Many articles, and notally hides and quinine, were put upon the free list great benefit to the consumer. In 1872 a reduction of 10 per cent. was made upon almost all the tariff schedules. But the which followed the commercial depression of 1873 led to a restoration of the rates of duty which had previously been levied, and the McKinley bill greatly in the country from its origin to the beginning of the war have been forgotten. For the first time in our history the attempt is errously made to destroy as far as possion of 1873 led to a restoration of the rates of duty which had previously been levied, and the McKinley bill did not he state to duty which had previously the countries. The author of the McKinley bill did not he state to duty which had previously the countries. The author of the McKinley bill did not he state to dear that would prevent the important on of all articles that can be made in the United State of the product of the pr

The Facts About Doctors.

The Facts About Doctors.

The Facts About Doctors.

The difficulties with which doctor's bills are collected is proverbial. People are not usually called upon to pay until they are better, and it is easy, when well, to forget the obligation you are under to he man of medicine.

Jokes about the mortality inflicted by the physician are too frequent. It may be that such jokes are meaningless, but they create a wrong impression—an impression which was better grounded in the days when medical science was largely of the blistering, bleeding, mercury giving sort. It took a rugged constitution to stand such treatment though no doubt it frequently proved to be beneficial in acute complaints.

But whatever truth there may have been formerly as a ground work for the stories about keeping patients half sick for the sake of the fees, and about physicking them to death, in these days, there is no foundation for such suggestions. Dr. R. G. Eccles in a recent lecture pays this just tribute to the profession:

"Medicine in all ages has attracted into sion:

"Medicine in all ages has attracted into "Medicine in all ages has attracted into its ranks the most self-sacrificing members of society. As a science, it was born in altruism. To this day it offers the greatest opportunities of any department of life for the practice of the most ennobling graces of character. These constitute a primary cause of its evolution.

Medical men stand alone in the earth wheeleal men stand alone in the earth among all others, striving with their whole might to extinguish their own business. They preach temprance, virtue, and cleanliness, knowing well that, when the people come to follow their advice, their occupation, like Othello's, will be gone. They establish boards of health, to arrest the spread of disease, while well aware that such sanitary measures steal money from their purses. How well they succeed is shown by official statistics.

Nobody ever fails to send for a physician in typhus fever. Only six persons in a million die of this disease. Many more used to die when no effort towards its suppression was made. Whooping-cough seldom frightens parents, and neighborly old ladies of both sexes give advice. As a consequence, 428 in a million die of this disease. Measles, being a little more serious, needs the doctor oftener, and only 341 in a million die, 5 carlet fever is still more alarming, so that medical advice is more in demand, and 222 in a million die of this disease; the decotor's presence oftener, and 188 in a million die. It is thus with every disease; the fewer it kills, the more people fear it, because, if they did not fear it, they would play the fool, and give it a chance to kill more people. If bakers, grocers, dry goods men, carpenters and members of all other lines of business gave as much of their labor in charity as doctors do, poverty would instantly be wiped from the earth."—The Healthy Home.

Civil Service, Reform Illustrated.

Civil Service, Reform Illustrated.

Newton, Mass., Dec., 22, 1890.

To the Editor of the Graphic:

The Republicans of Newton generally are to be congratulated upon their adhesion to the principle of civil service reform, in endorsing the petition for the reappointment of our efficient Postmaster, Mr. Geo. H. Morgan. It is an object lesson that augurs will for the success of this reform and for an era of purer politics. With such a spirit pervading our people non-partisan nominations will soon be the only ones possible of endorsement by the voter, in all that relates to the successful management of the business of the city of Newton.

The Reason.

To the Editor of the Graphic:

"Fair Play" in your issue of Dec. 5, seemed to be in a state of mind because Mr. Samuel Barnard of Ward 3, was not re-elected on the school committee and asks, "What did the average voter know of the reason why Mr. Barnard failed of an endorsement by the Republicans, but which was given to his coileague, Mrs. Abby Davis!" He further accuses some voters of being "weather vane watchers". The "average voters" of precinct one. Ward 2, wish to say to "Fair Play" that it took no wind to settle their opinions as to how they should vote, after the parsimonious attempt that was made to wrest from them their grammar school, by means of which action they lost their valued teacher, W. A. Spinney.

VOTER.

To try to cure caterrh by using local applica-tions. Catarrh is not a local but a constitutional disease. It is not a local but a constitutional disease, the is not a disease of the man's nose, but of the man. Therefore, to effect a cure, re-quires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, acting through the blood, reaches every part of the system, expelling the taint which causes the disease, and imparting health.

CREMENTON TRANSCRIPT HAS BEEN CONSOLIDATED WITH THE GRAP

THE SEWERAGE HEARING.

The large attendance at the hearing or Sewerage assessments, before the Council, Monday evening, showed that the citizens were very much interested in this matter and a large part of the taxable property of Newton was represented. No one objected to the plan for Sewerage, but on the contrary seemed to have confidence that the committee had done their work carefully and thoroughly, and so the speakers favored going ahead with that as fast as any one desired.

What they did object to was the settleing of the very important question of Sewerage assessments, without giving time for the people to think the matter over. The whole question was presented to the City Council Dec. 8th, without warning or previous hint of any features of the plans that were favored, and be-fore people had a chance to really know what the plans were, or how the assessments were to be levied, they heard that the whole thing was to be passed and be come a law.

If the committee had given to the public two or three months ago an out-line of the plan of making sewerage as-sessments, the citizens would have had time to think the matter over, and there probably would have been no objection to passing the whole thing now and settling the matter. There would be objections, of course, to any plan of making assessments, as probably no plan that could be adopted would be perfectly fair and equitable. After the people have had a chance to think the matter over they will see this, and all the committee have to do is to show that the plan they propose is the fairest and most equitable of any that could be adopted in Newton. The citizens are ready to be convinced and to submit to some injustice provided they are satisfied that any other plan would entail still greater injustice.

The hearing had one good effect, that by a somewhat searching cross-examination of the chairman of the sewerage committee by the citizens present, they succeeded in bringing out a very clear explanation of the plans of the committee, and the reasons for their favoring the plan they have adopted. This is a distinct gain, and a full report of the hearing is given on another page. It was shown very distinctly that no one was opposed to sewerage, and that the great objection to the committee's plan of assessments is that they sought to wass it before the people had a chance to know anything about it. As one of the speakers said, it is the most important measure ever presented to the city government, and for that reason, it should be fully understood before it is adopted.

The hearing brought out these facts in ate flavor. The system of assessments is the one adopted in Brookline, although it must be said that the conditions there are not exactly the same as in Newton. It also avoids putting any of the expense thing, as on the taxrate depends the prosperity of Newton. It also avoids taxing a man until he has received the benefit, although as the whole sum must be paid at some time, a good many tax-payers had rather anticipate it by a small sum each year than to have to pay The whole sum in a lump. It also brings the whole cost on the land, and none on mersonal property, which some of the emmittee think is a strong recommend-

The objections brought out were that at does not tax people in accordance with their ability to pay. The man with a $40,000 estate and the man with a $5,000 satup on y just the same per front foot. Wacant farming land worth five cents a foot pays just the same as land in the business centres worth a dollar a foot. This does not seem either just or equitable, but possibly the committee can show that any other play would be just as inthat any other plan would be just as in-souriable, and they should do this before taking any action. The citizens are will-ing to be convinced and they would also Ske to be convinced.

It is a very difficult problem, anyway, but it is not necessary on that account to cush any solution of it through without giving any explanations, or allowing peo-ple time to think it over. Most of the sewerage committee are reelected, and as there are only one new alderman and seven new councilmen next year, it would be quite as easy, probably, to explain matters to them as it has been to she present board, who have had only since Dec. Sht to think of it, that is, relaces who are not on the sewerage committee. Most of the speakers at the hearing could see no reason for pushing the matter through this year, or deciding about the assessments a year before any of them can be collected.

COMMON COUNCIL CAUCUS.

The Common Council Caucus Monday night was a drawn battle over the ques tion of the Presidency, both Councilman Collins and Councilman Mead having six votes each. The contest lasted for a half dozen ballots with no other result, and then Councilman Mead, thinking that perhaps he was objected to on account of his politics, withdrew in faver of Councilman Churchill, one of the staunchest Republicans in the city. Au informal ballot showed 7 for Churchill and 5 for Collins, but one of the latter quickly moved to take a formal ballot, so that the chance of ending the contest was lost.

The members are said to have been divided as follows: For Collins, Messrs. Grace, Forknall, Dutch, Sprague, Jordan and Moulton. For Mead, Messrs. Church-ill, Merchant, Roffe, Richardson, Bothfeld and Weed.

Party lines appeared to have been lost sight of, as Mr. Grace, who was elected on the Citizens' ticket and was expected to vote for Mr. Mead, went over to Mr. Collins, and the rest voted without re_ gard to politics.

There is said to have been a very hot campaign waged, and that the six Mead men will hold out indefinitely. The members hold another caucus this (Friday) evening, to try and settle the matter, and possibly a compromise candidate will have to be selected before any result can be reached. As the President of the Council has a seat on the school board the issue has an element of interest for the whole city.

HENRY GEORGE'S ideas on the taxation of land is evidently making progress. In the hearing on sewerage assessments before the City Council both Alderman Harbach and Councilman Dutch were urgent advocates of the Georgian theory that land only should be taxed, to pay for the sewers, and they also advocated that all land on streets through which sewers are built be taxed equally, no matter whether it was worth one dollar or one cent a foot. This is carrying the theory to its extreme limit, but it would be very popular with those who own the one dollar a foot land. Mr. Dutch said frankly that as he owned no real estate he did not think he should be taxed or ne did not think he should be taxed on personal property to pay for sowers, but he would probably find that by an in-crease in his rents, he will have to pay for sewerage just the same, if the cost of the sewers should all be assessed on land, and that is where the land owners have the advantage, if their land has building upon it that are in demand for business or living purposes. However the introduction of Georgian theories about land taxation in our City Council shows tha Newton is up to the times.

THE petition for the reappointment of Postmaster Morgan is one of the strongest petitions ever sent out of Newton, as it has upon it the names of the chairman of the Republican Ward and City Committee, the Republican representatives from Wards One and Seven, and all the prominent Republicans of the two wards. Such a petition is a strong testimony to Postmaster Morgan's popularity with the patrons of the office and ought to secure his retention. Congressman Cand-ler has so far listened to the wishes of the people who patronize the post offices, and has succeeded in securing reappointments where they have been asked for. In this case there is no opposition, so that the reappointment ought to be made as a matter of course. In another col-umn we give an article from the Boston Herald, every word of which will be endorsed by the people of Newton. Chairman Coffin signed the petition because he believes in civil service reform, and that good men should be reappointed, without regard to politics.

THE water main for the Oak Hill district called out quite a discussion Mon-day night, and those who favored it exhausted every effort to get it through. but the requisite two thirds vote could not be gained. The district needs water for fire purposes, and if there had been any prospect of five per cent return in the near future the order would have been passed. Perhaps when that new railroad, of which so much has been said, gets to running, the district will be developed and have all the modern conveniences. But for the present, as Alderman Pettee says the only thing the council has been willing to give them is the Poor House.

THE question of committee places is agitating the members of the next City Council and some of those who worked against the Citizens, are said to be fearful that they will not get very desirable places. But Mr. Hibbard is not that petty kind of a man, and when the list comes out we predict that no one could tell from the assignments, on which side of the political fence the members were. Election was over some weeks ago, and now the good of the city is the only question to be considered.

At a public hearing granted by the city At a puole nearing granted by the city government, the report of the committee on sewerage was discussed and the general opinion was in favor of "a delay on the question of the manner of assessments until the public could become better informed thereon.

Since the subject is open for public examination, I trust the advantages and disadvantages of the proposed system of of assessments, will be fully set forth through the public press, "that the public may become better informed thereon."

The report of the committee gives their conclusions without the reasons which led to those conclusions, which I regret at this time, since any criticism of a report would be more satisfactory with full data. However, the plan recommended by the combe more satisfactory with full data. How-ever, the plan recommended by the com-mittee seems to be so inequitable, that I will point out a few of its seeming inequa-lities in the hopes that they may be ex-plained away or corrected. The basis of assessment on the house sewer system as given in the committees report is as follows, viz: 4-10th of the cost is to be assessed on the frontage of land, and 6-10th on the area of land within 180 feet of the street sewered. The 4-10th is given in the street sewered. The 4-10th is given in the report as equalling 60 cents per front foot. The 6-10th is given in the report as 6 mills per square foot. Corner lots to pay in addition to the above, 60 cents for each front foot on side street sewered, to the depth of 180 feet, exempting 60 feet on side street. To make clear the workings of the Plan the following tables have been prepared. The basis of depth, 180 feet assured by the committee, per street eight than 180 feet, exempt at the present time from an assessment, parties owning large estates may enjoy them without expense for sewer, until they are cut up and sold for house lots. Whether this is equitable or not, let the hereafter decide, we must now deal with the factor of 180 feet deep as recommended by the Cake of the first example, alt of land 100 ft. front Take as first example, alt of land 100 ft. fr street sewered. Take as first example, a lot of land 100 ft. front by 180 feet deep. This is a good size house lot and if it is not on the corner of two streets sewered, the assessment for such a house lot will be $1.68 per front foot viz.

She was born in Marblehead, Jan. 7, 1818, her father, Rev. Joseph Merrill, being a congregational clergyman in that city.

Mrs. Coburn united with the church at an early age and lived an earnest, consecrated Christian life, always interested in church work, manifesting a ready sympathy for all in need, and will long be held in grateful remembrance by a large circle of friends in the community in which she lived.

She was endowed with rare gifts of person, of mind, and of heart, and was especially beautiful in her home, where she presided with quiet dignity and grace, and by the brightness of her smile, the graceousness of her manner, her cordial welcome, the kind and loving words which fell from her lips, made every one feel the sweet atmosphere of a Christian home. Although for many years in delicate health yet if possible she was always in her place in the sanctuary and interested in all the work and benevolence of the church. During the progress of the building of the new Ellot church she was particularly helpful by her encouraging words, her liberal subscriptions, and by the additional gift of a beautiful memorial window, the tribute of a loving heart to these who had gone before.

Her long life filled with Christian activity, her abiding faith in her Saviour, robbed death of its sting and enabled her to look forward with joy to the coming of her Lord. For the past few weeks, beginning Nov. 25, union revival services have been held under the auspicies of the Christian Endeavor societies and Epworth League of Newton. Although coming in the busy season with many of the young people, the meetings have been well attended and a spirit of earnestness manifest.

Speakers from Boston and suburbs, have been present at several of the meetings, who delivered helpful and stirring addresses pointing out and suggesting lines of work for the young people which seemed to be especially theirs. Dr. Clark, of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, has also been present at the meetings, urging the societies throughout the city to be alive to their privileges in the churches.

The consecration services have been well attended and many earnest testimonies from those present, told of their willingness and eagerness to be up and doing in the cause of Christ and the Church.

The meetings throughout the series have been helpful and beneficial to the churches visited. A number have taken the first steps toward a religous life and many helped to see new lines of work before them.

Wherever the meetings have been held a warm and hearty welcome has been given to strangers by pastors and churches, and many have expressed a wish that more meetings of the same nature should be held.

The performances of the Players are always smooth and evenly balanced, although Miss Annie Payson Call, the leading lady, is sure to overshadow her associates whenever she is in the cast. Miss Call acts more like a professional than any Boston amateur, with the possible exception of Miss Beal. Miss Call has devoted much time to the study of acting, and has taken lessons of professionals both in England and in America, The result of her study is evinced in the command she has over her resources, and the ease with which she makes her points tell,

—Rev. Mr. Metcalf preached at the Church of the Messiah on Sunday from the text, "The Lord is at Hand." In the early days of the Christian church there was an eager attitude of expectancy, as if Jesus Christ might at any moment come. Say not that such anxious watching had in it a tinge of fanaticism, and so was not a wholesome state in which to be. Had Jesus Christ come then, das He will come one day, would they not have been ready? Was not this morbid watching, if so you choose to consider it, infinitely better than the lukewarm waiting of these latter days? The advent season is full of calls to earnestness, to action, to faithfuiness, and this spirit should be with us through the Christian year. The Lord is at hand now. He never so went away that He has ever been absent from mankind at any age. He is in our midst today, this Mighty One, and is sadly unknown in comparison with what the might be believes it is christian roce. Our sins so weigh as down, our temptations so draw us from Christ's straight and narrow way. We run so many races of our own choosing, instead of the one set before us. There is a vast store of practically unused power of God in sacraments, in Scripture, in supplications. Jesus Christ has so much to give us, and we are content with so little. It seems as unreal that the Lord is actually at hand, that we grope after Him in a very dim kind of way. He says "Ask and ye shall receive," and we ask with such hesitancy that we receive correspondingly. We are weak because we will not let Him make us strong. If we should really begin to use this wonderful force, it would be like a new incoming of the Lord Himself into our hearts and lives, which would speed our feet with new swiffness to run the way of God's commandments, to press forward with steadfast zeal towards the heavenly country. We need not run feebly and faiteringly, when there are so many unused spiritual powers waiting to be appropriated. If perchance a temptation overcome us, He can "wi

FAMOUS YET UKNNOWN.

WIVES WHO ARE HIDDEN BY THEIR HUS BAND'S FAME, YET WHO ARE WON-DERFUL WOMEN.

The wife of a famous man will oft-times be completely hidden by the dazz'e of her husband's fame, and it is astonish ng how little is known of those women whose husband's names are househo'd words throughout the country. While the newspapers teem with the name of Thomas A. Edison, nothing is comparatively known or heard of Mrs. Edison. Every newspaper reader knows the name of Chauncey M. Depew, but of Mrs. Depew only the most casual reference is made. Even in England, no one ever hears of Lady Tennyson or Mrs. Gladstone. And the same is true of the wives of such men as P. T. Barnum, Will Carleton, John Wanamaker, Spurgeon, W. D. Howells, Dr. Talmage, "Mark Twain," and James G. Blaine. Often these very wives have been the makers of their husbands' careers. Their portraits are even less known than their lives. In a splendid series to be called "Unknown Wives of Well-known Men," The Ladies' Home Journal of Philadel-phia, will, during next year, sketch all these women and others, presenting their portraits, in many cases, for the first time to the public. whose husband's names are househ

Mr. Nat C. Goodwin.

The very popular and always heartily greeted comedian, Mr. Nat C. Goodwin, comes to the Tremont theatre on Monday night next, and will pass the New Year week and its successor in his former home, and the city wherein he has made his earliest and greatest successes. Of late years, Mr. Goodwin has achieved many veritable artistic triumphs; but he will repeat none of his former successes, presenting rather a new play for him here, one in which he has absolutely surpassed any previous assumption: "The NOMINEE." This work adapted and Americanized from the French, retains all the brightness, wit and repartee of the original with an abundance of local humor.

This play was specially switched.

of the original with an abundance of local humor.

This play was specially written in its present form for Mr. Goodwin, and he simply appears as his natural self. He employs no aids in the way of wig or make-up, out is seen just as he is at home, or on the street. As Jack Medford in "The Nominee" the man of the world, with ample wealth to gratify his tastes, he is seen to the greatest possible advantage. Medford has a lovely wife and tyrannous mother-in-law. He wants to go to New York for a little fun and gives his mother-in-law and family to understand that he is going to run for Congress on the Democratic ticket in an adjoining district. His mother-in-law is delighted and speeds him away to secure his election. Medford goes to New York and his secretary, a rabid Republican, represents him at the election and makes a mess of the whole affair by getting Medford elected on the wrong ticket. These complications afford no end of funny suspense and amusement.

During a certain voyage of a down east vessel the mate, who usually kept the log, became intoxicated one day and was unable to attend to his duty. As the man very rarely committed the offence the captain excused him and attended to the log himself, concluding with this; "The mate has been drunk all day." Next day the mate was on deck and resumed his duties. Looking at the log he discovered the entry the captain had made and ventured to remonstrate with his superior. "What was the need, sir," he asked. "of putting that down on the log?" "Wasn't it true?" asked the captain. Yes, sir; but it does not seem necessary to enter it on the log." "Well," said the captain, "since it was true it had better stand; it had better stand."
The next day the captain had occasion to look at the log, and at the end of the entry which the mate had made was found this item: "The captain has been sober all day." The captain had the mate summoned and thundered: "What do you mean by putting down that entry? Am I not sober every day?" 'Yes, sir; "but wasn't it true?" "Why, of sourse, it was true!" "Well, then, sir," said the mate, "since it was true I think it had better stand; it had better stand."—Traveller's Record.

UNDER THE CHRISTMAS STAR.

"O King, His spirit is with us now!" -[Ben-Hur.

Overhead the moon, a glorious, golden globe in the far heavens, was sending her gentle light upon that fair city, lying so many, many thousands of miles beneath her. It touched to sudden beauty the restless waves of the wide bay, the countresuless waves of the wide oay, the count-less roofs beyond, and the masted ship riding at their safe anchor; it shone upon the snow powdered trees in those broad city squares, and mingled softly with the long streets and cheerily glowing lights; it lay upon the houses and stores in gleaming silver patches. And the throng ing, busy crowds of people moved on and sweet bells rang out, and the calls and cries of a swift-living world were ounded upon the clear, cold night wind.

Out of the snow in its stilly church yard, above the busy, rushing life around it, heavenward towered beautiful spire church, and the tiny, shabby, weary figure sleeping in the carvern doorway! Oa hand clutching a violin, hugged tight t the boyish breast, and the tired head in soundest slumber, drooping against those closed doors. And the night was kind to closed doors. And the night was kind to the child wanderer. Only the faintest breath of the cold touched his worn gar ments, and the myriad noise of the city was dulled beyond his ear.

Aside, in a strip of God's own green' the old church stood. From within there came the sound of music, but still outside the boy slept on. Organist and choir were rehearsing the joyous carols, for it was Chrstmas eve.

Upon that quiet street, in the church's long shadow, two people stood silently listening. Oh, the wealth of glory in that carol! Afar, the Father heard it:—

"At early dawn our feet shall seek

"At early dawn our feet shall seek The manger where the Baby lies. The Holy child, all fair and meek, Beneath a Mother's brooding eyes."

Beneath a Mother's brooding eyes."

Pare and sweet as a bird's the singer's voice soared on, and through the window they saw him standing, under the great organ; that pure faced boy soprano, with the sunny hair and carnest gray eyes. Then in sweetest harmony pealed forth the organ, through that shadowy, moonlighted church, and in glad refrain those choristers sang:—

"O star of Love! O star of Home! Still guide us on the pilgrim way; Afar p: oclaim a Savior come, And usher in our Christmas day."

And user in our crismas any.

And then, as if-called forth from on high by the loving adoration of those words, above the spire of that old church fair in the far skies, one rare, pale star gleamed through the night. And still the child slept on.

Again the song, with its thrilling notes woke the stillness:—

"No gold is in our little hands, Nor any spice or balm have we; But lo! we come in joyful bands To bless the child on Mary's knee

To bless the child on Mary's knee."

The listeners drew nearer; and now they waited almost under the belfry, and that one star. Suddenly with the first bars of the organ's refrain, there came a voice; a tender, liquid, woman's voice.
"A child—a little boy! Asleep,—see! Outdoors this winter night—oh John!"

A hand light as a snowflake was laid upon the little lad's shoulder. "Come my boy, wake up!" said a man's kind todes.

my boy, wake up!" said a man's kind tones.

The child stirred sleepily. "I'm comin', father,—seems as if I was so extra sleepy this mornin'."

Half-awakened, he still held fast the violin, slowly opened his eyes, and saw, bending above him a woman's face.
"Poor-child," she said gently, "we had to rouse you. It is getting late dear, and the night is cold."

With a little shiver, the boy rubbed his eyes, and rose up slowly. "Why, dear me I must have been asleep! 'Twas a long walk, and I was tired. Thank you, ma'm, for waking me. Father'll wonder." And he touched his shabby cap with a certain boyish grace.

certain boyish grace.

'How did you come here my boy?'
asked the gentleman pleasantly.

"O star of Love! O star of Home! Still guide us on the pilgrim way"-

"Ostar of Love! Ostar of Home!
Still guide us on the pilgrim way"— sang the choristers, jubilant.
"Twas that, I think," said the boy, pointing to the lighted window. "The music sounded so pretty. Sometimes we come here Sundays, father and me. We sit down by the door. Father loves to hear 'em. He's blind, you know. He says the bells call him, sayin' so pretty 'cross the city,' Jesus, Redeemer! Jesus, Redeemer! And so I bring him, Tonight, you see, I was playin' and singura good ways from here." As he spoke to touched lightly his violin. "And I walked home. It's Christmas eve, you know. The door-way looked so comfortable, I stopped to rest a minute. The music was such a treat. But I must be going now. Father'll miss me."
He buttoned still more closely the thin coat across his chest, placed his cap farther down upon his forehead, and turned as if to go.
"Wait a moment, please," said the gente voice, and the lovely face, which had listened with such earnestness to the boysish words, grew bright from the earnest purpos."
"My husband, Mr. Stanley, and I, are purpos.

"My husband, Mr. Stinley, and 1, are very fond of music. Would you come tomorrow night with your father, and play for us? The children have their tree, and we shall have a merry time, I hope. Don't refuse us, please—on Christmas Eve?"

Christmas Eve?'
A mother herself, with that Christlike pity for burdened humanity, filling her tender heart, which truest motherhood brings—who so fit'ed in God's great world to feel for another mother's child?
She longed so to help them, her brethren.
Dear God! this lonely boy and his blind father!

She turned to her busband, in her eyes She turned to her husband, in her eyes that unfailing trust so beautiful to see between those who are "one in heart."

In the same spirit he answered her. "We shall be glad indeed to welcome you, my boy," he said warmly. "It would give me much pleasure to meet your father."

your father."
"And there is Elizabeth, our little lame girl," said Elizabeth's mother softly.
"Thank you, ma'am, very much, and you, too, sir!" How cheerful his voice sounded.

you, too, sir!" How cheerful his voice sounded.

"I'll be glad to come and bring father. His name is Weiens, and I am Ernst," and again he gratefully thanked them, with that sudden glow in his bright eyes. Then, for the lighted window was growing dimmer, the organ was silent, and already there was a sound as of coming feet, they bade him good night, and went their way homeward, under the clear, cold breath of the night wind.

Out of the church so full of the coming Christmas by the choristers come in many scattered groups, and presently the echo of their footsteps died away.

The night wore on, with here and there a bell to mark the passing hour. A hush held the city. While alone in the snow and silver light, watched by the angels, its spire heavenward pointing to that one gleaming star, stood beautiful old Saint christmas, blessed Christmas! with its tiding of great joy! Its memory of the Holy Child, and that khan at Bethlehem; its snow, and pine, and holly, and the sound of mellow bells, its gifts, and "merrie greetynges," its laughter, cheer and songs! How we cherish it, and love, as it comes each fading year, and with "the glorious company on high," the dear ones who have passed beyond the shadow, and those who still walk with us, life's familiar pathway, joined in one mighty throng, we cry with lowly reverence; "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord!" Early that Christmas morning the sun, for whose coming so many thousands of children had waited in eager expectation since the gray dawn, peeped into the windows of a little room in the top story of a city lodging house, and the sight so pleased him that broader and broader he shed those precious beams till the earth was flooded with their light. Two pots of flourishing geraniums those narrow window sills held, and bravely scarlet, they tried to be hardy and live. And oh, the cleanliness of the room beyond them! White gleamed the rough board floor and the few wooden chairs of which the poor room boasted; scrubbed till it shone was that tiny table, and the stove rejoiced in a coat of as shiny ebony as any house-keeper's heart could wish. Through an open door, one saw what appeared to be a good sized closet, but then it held a bed.

Upon the mantel shelf above the stove, a little quaintly made wooden clock tested away observing.

Upon the mantel shelf above the stove, a little quaintly made wooden clock ticked away cheerily. Beside it were placed some curiously carved wooden flagres of animals, this, and the colored print of a mountain view upon the opposite wall, was all the ornament beside that the room held.

But upon the group beside the table, a father and son, the sun smiled his warmest. He, bent and blind and worn, carving swiftly with slight, skilful fingers; the boy beside him slender, brown-haired and thoughtful eyed, busily watching, flow that stork grew under the sure strokes!

"A lame madchen, she told thee, lad?" the father asked it pityingly. "Ach, well must I cut him for her, liebes fraulein!" "Then," as if troubled by a hidden doubt, "Errst, boy, dost thou think it fit to give a little American lady?" he asked wistfully, trying his patient, blind way, to read the boy's face. For a moment that bright face clouded, then "Ja wohl, dear father," he answered reassuringly, "I did see the mother's face! Oh how beautiful and good it was,—such big blue eyes and hair like gold. And the sweetest smile on it, a-comin' and goin' all the time, she taiked to me. The moon was so bright I could see just as plain as could be. Oh, father, I never thought about anythin' when she asked me in that pretty way, but just said wo'd come. It was all right for me, wasn't it father—sayin' yes that way?"

The hearty answer reassured him. "Certainly, my son."

"And the gentleman, her husband, was kind, too. But, oh, as for her?"—he sighed enthusiastically.

"Christomas day—Christmas day," the blind man spoke it musingly. "How they are spending it now in mein Vaterland. The sun does shine, how grand! upon these red-roofed houses; the window panes are all aglow; but, ah me! from the tall, tall chimneys the stork's have fled far southward. Beyond, the light will fall fair upon that castle on the hill, and the wind will hide soft in those archways. Mein V and taking his cap and the violin, lather and son went once more down the steep stairs, out into the dusk of the coming night.

Light shone brilliantly through the window of 39 Portland place, as those two guests went up the broad stone steps, and as the door was opened, in answer to that timid ring, the mistress of the house stepped forward to greet them. The blind man felt the clasp of soft warm hands, and heard her wish them "a merric Christmas!" in her glad, sweet voice; and Ernst thought her more lovely than ever as she stood there with those smiles of welcome on her lips; the light falling full upon her white dress and wavy gold hair, her faintly flushed cheeks and starry eyes.

To the sound of happy laughter, and the music of child voices they entered the cozy library. Mr. Stauley rose to meet them, with Marion, the baby, in his arms. Beside the grate fire, in her wheel-chair, was the lame child, Elizabeth," "Saint Elizabeth," her parents often called her, with tear-wet eyes. Her hold upon this busy life was so frail, her nature so truly spiritual. And leaning upon "sister's chair" stood Guy the eldest, and a frank, noble-hearted boy. Beside the table, looking about her with shy, bright eyes, was a slender darkhaired young girl, whom they were told was "Miss Vauney," and whom her patrons knew as "the little French dressmaker."

"Was there ever a prettier place?" Ernst thought, as he looked about him; at the pictures, and tables, and chairs, the shelves of Landsome books, the flowers and pretty figures, the crackling fire, and fairest of all, the group of living people.

the shelves of Eandsome books, the flowers and pretty figures, the crackling fire, and fairest of all, the group of living people.

Everybody was so kind and pleasant-mannered, everybody was so merry and good-humored, that when Baby Marion crept suddenly to Herr Weilens's knee, and rested upon it her velvet cheek, and then laughed out in glee from the stronghold of his lap, and dear Elizabeth, waking slowly with the help of that pathetic, tapping crutch, to thank him with a kiss for her pretty gift, laid her curly head upon his breast—ah' how those guests felt then in their hearts!—not strangers taken in, but all one family.

Oh, what a feast they had that night! The big room fragrant with Christmas greens, the table glittering with glass and silver and colored lights, laden with savory food and tempting dainties. What a sight was the bouncing plumpudding, with its crest of holly and its circle of blazing fire! Ernst nearly stared his eyes out, and the timid little French dressmaker caught her breath in astonishment, and clapped her hands crying "Helas!" in her own swift tongue.

Merrily they laughed, when the baby in her nurse's arm begged "to be divved a divumitick." And by and by, when they had feasted royally, Mrs. Stanley took them all back to the pleasant library, and sat with baby Marion on her lap, beside the blind guest in his armchair, as he plaged, and his boy sang for them. Guy from his low seat at his sister's feet looked and listened, while Lois Vanney from her sung corner watched them with grave brown eyes.

Just as the last soft strains of a slumber song how as singfing died away, a bell sounded. The room grew dark—open flew the wide doors facing them, and oh, wonderful—Tall, sparkling, brilliantly lighted, and majestic, stood the Christmas tree! And while they waited breathless from astonishment and delight, down the chimney place tumbled—jolly old Santa Claus!

SOME OF THE POLITICAL GOSSIP FROM WASHINGTON.

[Correspondence Springfield Republican.]

The members of the Massachusetts delegation who were defeated in the election accept their fate very good humoredly. Mr. Morse of course is in high feather at his substantial plurality, but Mr. Walker has prepared a table which shows that his loss in plurality was the smallest of any republican in the state, and Mr. Lodge's the largest. Mr. Randall suffered the next largest cut to Mr. Lodge, but as he had the largest republican plurality in the state he was a little nettled when he saw Mr. Walker's way of putting it. Those who understand the characteristics of the five Massachusetts republicans who will be in the next delegation are disposed to look forward to their conferences together with some amusement. Gen. Cogswell will be "the dean" of the delegation, and will have all he can do to preserve harmony among the other four. Mr. Walker has a decided opinion of Mr. Lodge, which he dots not hesitate to express in pretty foreible English, Mr. Morse feels bound to protect his public building bills against the machinations of his colleagues with similar bills, and none of the delegation is over fond of the member from Canton. Altogether the meeting of the republican delegation promise to be very lively occasions. "A masterly state of inactivity" is Altogether the meeting of the republican delegation promise to be very lively occasions.

"A masterly state of inactivity" is the present attitude of Congressman Elijah A. Morse toward the governorship. He hears with pleasure the many kindly things said about his substantial majority in the 2d district, but he is not yet going to work to capture delegates. If believes he can rely for delegates, if he decides to be a candidate, upon the good temperance and church-going people of the state, and that they will easily overcome the wiles of more worldly politicians. If elected governor next November be would be able to sit for a month in the new Congress andvote again for Mr. Reed for speaker. His election in a state which had just voted democratic might entitle him to a favorable mention for a place on the national ticket, and life elected he would be the warm st friend of temperance who ever occupied the White House. If defeated in the n tional convention, he would again be a candidate for governor at the polls and might prove a formidable rival of Mr. Lodge and Speaker Barrett for the seat of Senator Dawes. There is some talk here among Llassachusetts men of Mr. Greenhalge or Mr. Rockwell as a gubernatorial candidate, but it is generally admitted that Mr. Morse would follow in the path of Gov. Long, Mr. Bishop and Mr. Brackett in carrying off the morial element in the little country towns in spite of the opposition of Harvard college and the city element.

If old people are forgetful, they always re-nember to use Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

A SINGER'S ROYAL GUEST.

HOW MADAME ALBANI ENTERTAINS QUEEN VICTORIA AT AN INFORMAL TEA.

QUEEN VICTORIA AT AN INFORMAL TRA.

Once every summer Queen Victoria drives over from her Balmoral Castle to the Scottish Highlands home of Madame Albani-Gye, the famous prima-donna, where the latter entertains her at an informal tea. For years the Queen has made a practice of this, a compliment which Her Majesty bestows upon no other woman in the kingdom. It is a return for Madame Albani's appearences each year at Court to sing before the Queen, and to the prima-donna it affords an exceptional glimpse of England's royal soverign.

"No outsiders are ever present," says Madame Albani, "and I see Victoria as a woman; never as a queen."

How do you entertain your royal guest?" was asked of the prima-donna by a friend.

And for more than an hour the great singer held the uninterruped interest of a private dinner-party with the story of how she served a tea for the Queen.

So full of interest was the narrative that Madame Albani was induced to write out the account, and it will shortly appear in The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, under the title of "Victoria at the Tea-Table." Of its freshness of interest the caption of the article is the best indication.

Dr. Flint explains the method not only of Dr. Koch's treatment of consumption, but the probable early extension of a sinilar system of treatment to most of the other diseases that are caused by baccill, such as diptheria, typhoid fever, and measles.

In the same number of The Forum Prof. Emile de Laveleye, the famous Belgian publicist, will have an article explaining "The Division of Africa' among the European nations, accompanied with a map showing the territory of each, Mr. Thomas G. Shearman will discuss the probability of 'The Coming Billionaire,' to show how a continuance of our present system of taxation will be sure to bring him. Among the other articles of this number will be "Formative Influences," by President Timothy Dwight of Yale, "its Verse in Danger?" by Edmund Gosse; "Does the Negro Seek Social Equality?" by Rev. J. None of his friends mourn him more sincerely than his associates in the counting-room, who knew his absolute honesty, who saw his painstaking and accurate faithfulness, and who enjoyed daily companionship with him for eight years. Parting with him under any circumstances would have caused deep regret, but this parting came at the end of a whole year's battle with consumption, a battle fought without hope, but with brave and patient resolution; its coming was foretold by pallor and weakness, and by the hushed respect with which daily business was done in the presence of the end, it twas faced bravely, and grief is tempered with thankfulness, that pain and wistful struggles are done with, and with the memory of friendship with a character rare among men. The funeral took place from the Church of Our Lady, at Newton, Monday morning. The services were conducted by Rev. Father Wholey of this place, and were attended by a large number of friends, among whom were Messrs. Daniel E. Ahern, Frederick McDonald, Albert J. —On the 18th of Dec. Rev. P. H. Callanan was given an invitation to visit Foxboro, his former parish, on the 10th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood. On arriving there he was taken to St. Mary's church, which was crowded with his former parishoners and friends, and after listening to some charming music he was presented with a purse of $500. after an address, which reviewed the great work he had done in his six years in Foxboro, and the manner in which he had gained the hearts of all. It was some moments before Father Callanan could reply, so overcome was he by such an expression of love, but he thanked his friends warmly and gave them wise and earnest counsel. Father Callanan built a fine church in Foxboro in place of the chapel which he found there, and succeeded in paying off all the debt injury for many other improvements.

—The safe in the ticket office in the Wellesley tills station on the Roston & Al-curred in building the church, besides paying for many other improvements.

—The safe in the ticket office in the Wellesley Hills station on the Boston & Albany railroad was blown open at an early hour Monday morning. A hole was drilled through the top and a charge of glant powder used in blowing it open, literally smashing the iron chest into fragments. The force of the explosion blew out the windows of the ticket office and tore down the partition walls and ceiling. The safe contained about $30 in cash and some valuable papers, which were destroyed. Lower Falls parties are suspected of the job. Several stations along the line of the Newton circuit railroad have been entered recently, and the safes blown open, a luge charge of powder being used in each case, and the explosion resulting in serious damage. The police connect the same gang with all the depot breaks, and hope to secure sufficient evidence to make several arrests. At the Wellesley Hills station an entrance was effected by prying open a window, the ticket office door being subsequently forced open.

Their guests were 112 to set the sent of the section of the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and the Boston Home Missionary Association. The party arrived at Waban about 10 o'clock coming in special cars furnished by the B. & A. R. R. Co. and returning at 5 p. m. The children enjoyed a real Christmas dinner and looked very happy, and, apparently, entirely contented with the world. They were photographed in a group outside of the hall after the festivities.

Hies.

Wednesday night was the occasion of the first of six entertainments to be held at Collins Hall and proved to be a most enjoy able affair. The performers were Mrs. W. F. Flint, Mrs. A. Davidson, Miss Emma E. Carpenter, the Misses Collins, Miss Lucie Bevls, Miss Laura L. Beck, Miss May A. Bosley, Mr. C. J. Buffum, Mr. Harry Young, The first on the program, "O Hush My Baby," by the Brookline funartet was finely rendered and brought forth deserved appliause. The next a Plano duet by Mrs. Flint and Mrs. Davidson, was well performed and encored, but on account of the bashfulness of the performers was not repeated. The next a Violin and Plano duet by the Misses Collins was gracefully and nicely performed, they are particulary modest and pleasing in their manner and held their audience well in both of their performances. The next a song, "In Old Madrid," by Mr. Harry Xoung, given in his inimical manner too well known by the public to call for comment. The next a recitation by Miss Emma E. Carpenter of the "Charlot Race" by Ben Hur, was rendered in a clear and precise manner that called forth repeated rounds of applause and "Dot Dog" was given. In her next sellection "The Pearl of The Phillippines" sie did even better than the first and hands were clapped as she rose to go on the platform. We predict for Miss Carpenter a brilliant future as she renders her pieces in a masterly manner and is attractive on the stage. Miss Bevis, who rendered "Love's Sorrows," and Miss Bosley who rendered "Afterward," had both powerful and beautiful voices and were heartily encored. "Afterward," had both powerful and beautiful voices and were heartily encored. "Miss Bevk and Mr. Buffum, who sang "Oh That We Two Were Maying," were repeatedly called for but could not be induced to respond otherwise than in the quartet singing of "Now the Day is over," which closed a very enjoyable evening well patronized by the people of Newton. The second entertainment will be given Jan. 13, by Louis K. Harlow, subject "Through Holland with a black stek," illustrated with charcoal sketches.—QUIMIX.

The Columbia Cicyle calendar, issued by the Pope mfg. Co. of Boston is a handy thing to have, as it has a page for each day of the year, with blank space for memoranda, and each page has a paragraph relating to cycling and kin-dred subjects.
